America Gives Over Six Million For Famine Relief

(China Press Correspondence)
Peking, March 24.—A total of $6,200,000 gold, or over $6,400,000 in local currency, has been sent to China by Americans for famine relief. Of this amount, $1,000,000 gold has been contributed by the American Red Cross, an organization always engaged in relief all over the world, wherever the need is most urgent. Its funds come from annual membership dues at the rate of one gold dollar per person and the membership is now over ten million persons.

The remaining $5,200,000 gold was sent over by the American Committee of which Thomas W. Lamont is Chairman, which has been soliciting from Americans special contributions for the relief of China's famine stricken districts. This amount has been divided by the local American Advisory Committee to working committees in all the famine districts.

At a meeting of the American Advisory Committee held on Thursday, March 17, a sub-committee, consisting of Mr. H. C. Every, Mr. Roger S. Greene, and Reverend George L. Davis, was appointed to give special attention to the famine relief work of the working committees in the several provinces, as an aid to the Advisory Committee in allocating the American funds.

Shanghai, complacent, self-satisfied as ever, has failed to strike its quota in the Famine Relief Drive inaugurated two weeks ago. Aiming at the figure of $1,000,000 the town began the campaign with the expressed determination of setting a record in the effort to raise funds for the alleviation of the sufferings of the dying thousands in the famine stricken provinces. A relief drive committee was organized, laid out a scheme of activity and went to work. The drive was arranged to have ended a week ago, but at that time the amount collected was so far below the figure which it was planned to collect that the committee determined to continue its activities until the end of March.

The Famine Tag Day of March 19 was supposed to end the drive demonstration. It turned out to be the most efficient money raising item on the program, some $25,000 being collected by Shanghai Chinese students and Boy Scouts, but it was practically the only feature of the plan which did come up to expectations in the schedule of fund raising mapped out by the officials in charge.

PROPOSES BIG CONFERENCE ON NAVY REDUCTION

British M. P. Would Invite U.S. and Japan To Send Delegates

(Reuters Service)
London, March 24.—In the House of Commons today Mr. Percy Hurd, Coalition Unionist, asked the Prime Minister to consider the desirability of inviting the Governments of the United States and Japan to send special representatives to London in June in order that the problem of naval armaments might be considered at a friendly conference on the lines of President Harding's inaugural speech and Lord Lee's recent declaration, with the advantage of the presence of Ministers of the Dominions and India in London.

Lieut. Colonel Sir Frederick Hall, Unionist, asked what steps had been taken to arrange for a discussion of naval programs between representatives of Great Britain and the United States. Mr. Lloyd George replied that any statement on this important question now would be premature.

EMPRESS IS DUE THIS MORNING; COLOMBIA SAILS

C.P.O.S. Liner Arrives Today; Pacific Mailer Off For U.S. At Noon

The Pacific Mail steamer, Colombia, which arrived in Shanghai from Hongkong yesterday afternoon, will sail from the China Merchants' Central Wharf for San Francisco by way of Kobe, Yokohama and Honolulu at 12:30 p.m. today. Included on its passenger list are Mrs. Edna Lee Booker, Miss A. S. Mayhew, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Hoffman, Mrs. D. W. Murphy, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Atkinson, Misses Barbara and Virginia Atkinson, and Mr. A. S. Allan. Among those bound for Japan ports are Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Laval, Mr. J. A. Hallam, F. F. Fairman, D. McDonald, and Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Fowler.

Arrivals from Hongkong and Shanghai on the Colombia included Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Bolton, Miss E. K. DeVault, Mr. and Mrs. William M. Drennon, Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Hall, Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Rader, and Mrs. G. C. Reis.

The C.P.O.S. liner, Empress of Russia, was due off Woosung early in the morning and the tender with inbound passengers is expected to reach the Customs Jetty about 9:30 o'clock this morning. The Empress of Russia sails for Manila and Hongkong at noon today, the tender with outgoing passengers and baggage departing at 8:30 a.m.

Among those who sailed for Vancouver yesterday on the C.P.O.S. Empress of Japan were Mrs. T. H. U. Aldridge, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Brownwell, E. G. Barnes, E. W. Campbell, A. J. Daniels, E. H. Gasker, Mrs. E. Marsden, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Maddock, T. H. Sheridan, and O. G. Steen. GOLD STOLEN ON EMPRESS A shipment of gold bullion, valued at Pecos 22,000, shipped to the United States on the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Russia by the Benguet Consolidated Mining Company early last month, was stolen from the registered mail sacks aboard-ship, says the Manila Times.

DEATH ENDS CAREER OF CARDINAL GIBBONS

Famous Churchman Passes Away At Home In Baltimore

LEADER IN U.S. Long Known As One Of The Nation's Foremost Public Men

(Reuters Service)
New York, March 24.—The death is announced of Cardinal Gibbons, Archbishop of Baltimore and Roman Catholic Primate of the United States.

James Cardinal Gibbons, the grand old man of American Catholicism, was undoubtedly one of the best-beloved prelates of modern times. Though a prince of the church, he never lost the simple, fatherly devotion of a parish priest; though a holder of one of the highest honors within the gift of the Roman hierarchy, he never showed by word or deed a narrow attitude toward any other faith. A statesman in the highest sense of the word, he helped to shape national public opinion in the way that pointed to the betterment of American life. He never tried to force his views upon the attention of the country, yet in such esteem was his judgment held that the leading publications of America asked his opinion on every important problem which has confronted the nation during the past thirty years. His utterances were given conspicuous notice in practically all the newspapers of the country, and had no mean influence in guiding the views even of those who were loyal to other faiths.

ABOVE PREJUDICE The most distinguishing feature of the great prelate's personality was his ability to look above personal prejudice and beyond the confines of time—to see every question in its relation to history and to the great building forces of the world, in a setting where the passions of the moment could have no place. Cardinal Gibbons was in the present time, but not of it. Living in thought in the gray reaches of eternity, he became detached from the age in which he moved and was privileged to view the world from the high spiritual hill-tops known by but few statesmen and widely differing religious views recognized this quality in the man and showed no resentment when his opinion was asked by presidents, senators, and Supreme Court Justices. The Cardinal was in terms of close friendship with every president who sat in the White House during the past three decades, and men of such opposed personalities as Theodore Roosevelt and Woodrow Wilson admired him equally.

Besides his distinctions as priest and counsellor, Cardinal Gibbons was a writer with power in his pen and a way of clarifying a subject that won countless adherents to his views. Those who list the "Best Sellers" of America usually forget a book with a sales list amounting to ten million copies, the "Faith of Our Fathers," written by the churchman to explain in clear and simple terms the doctrines of Roman Catholicism. "Our Christian Heritage," "The Ambassador of Christ," and "A Retrospect of Fifty Years" are among his other notable works. The famous prelate also deserves a high place among American educators, for the Catholic University of America was the materialization of his desire and he was elected chancellor after its founding in 1864.

WAS 86 YEARS OLD Born in Baltimore eighty-six years ago, the eminent churchman received his early education in Ireland and returned later to America to enter St. Charles College. On completing his academic course, he enrolled at St. Mary's Seminary, Baltimore, to undergo preparation for the priesthood. After his ordination in 1861, he spent a short time organizing missions in Baltimore and was then made secretary to Archbishop Martin J. Spaulding. The young priest's ability received signal recognition by his consecration as bishop only seven years after his ordination. It was during the four years spent in the new Vicariate Apostolic of North Carolina that he wrote the famous "Faith of Our Fathers" for use in his mission. The book has run through forty editions in America and seventy in England, arousing widespread interest and occasion-

JAP ARMY TO QUIT ISLAND 'SOON,' SAYS STATEMENT

Military Rule Exists "In Name Only" Tokio Asserts

YAP "WORTHLESS"

"Occupation Unduly Emphasized" Declares Foreign Office

(Reuters Pacific Service)
Tokio, March 24.—The following statement has been issued by the Japanese Foreign Office:

"The maintenance of peace in the Orient and the safeguarding of commerce and navigation in the Pacific were Japan's purpose in destroying the German fleet and occupying the former German islands.

"In conformity with Allied administrative methods in occupied territories, Japan introduced military administration, and established garrisons in the principal islands but the administration as military only in name, for experienced civilians are performing the actual executive work, without interference from the military and are devoting their efforts toward the development of peace and the welfare of the natives. This has been unanimously recognized by all visitors to the islands.

"In accordance with the Supreme Council's resolution of 1919 and the terms of the mandate fixed by the League of Nations Council in December last, Japan is now preparing a suitable administrative organ whose object will be to promote the moral and material happiness and the social progress of the inhabitants. The military administration will shortly be abolished.

"Recent rumors of the construction of fortifications on the islands and of Japanese naval activity there are entirely unfounded. It is very regrettable that newspapers should publish such fabrications.

NO FORTIFICATIONS

"There is apparently a tendency to exaggerate the economic and strategic value of the islands and to attach undue importance to Japan's occupation of them but their total area is less than that of the state of Rhode Island. Economically the islands are scarcely worth mentioning, while strategically they are unimportant because Japan, true to the spirit of mandatory rule, has disavowed all intention to establish military or naval bases or fortifications.

"Yap is one third the area of Guam, its harbor will barely accommodate three small steamers. Except for the cable facilities Yap is worthless, barren soil in mid-ocean. It might as well be said that America secured control of the Atlantic through her purchase of the Virgin Islands as that Japan has staked out an area of 4,000,000 square miles from Kamehatcha to the South Pacific through the mandated islands.

"There have been certain changes of administrative posts due to climatic and communication considerations, but rumors of strategic preparations are groundless.

"Foreign firms are actually doing business with the islands and American missionaries are freely working there, despite reports of Japan's interference with or prohibition of such activities, which reports are pure fabrications.

Chang Tso-lin, With Heavy Guards, Goes To Paoting; Plans For Coup Complete

Chang Tso-lin, the Fengtien Tsuchun, arrived in Tientsin on Friday with two divisions of bodyguards, the 27th and 28th divisions, and proceeded immediately to Paoting to consult his rival, Tsao K'un.

Business in Peking is at a standstill as all the officials are now devoting their attention to carrying favor from the Mukden Chief. For whatever may be the truth, Peking believes that Chang Tso-lin has perfected his plans for seizing the capital, and intends to carry off his coup within a very few days.

This according to well-informed Chinese, is Chang's program. It began moving when on March 21, he celebrated his birthday with such an elaborate program as no other military man has seen.

While delegates from the high-ranking executives down to the regimental commanders were in Mukden to offer their congratulations, a military conference was in session with Chang dictating the terms which may cause a political storm in North China.

Newspaper reports indicate that the conference planned to relieve Unga, Kwangsi and Hunan.

That the delegates did discuss these topics cannot be denied, but there were other matters far more important to Chang than these.

HAS OTHER AMBITIONS

From a leader of the Hunghutse who fought for Japan during the Russo-Japanese War to the Inspector-General of the Three Eastern Provinces, Chang Tso-lin has gathered power and influence, perhaps, more than any other Tsuchun of the day. But his ambition has not yet been satisfied. Shantung and Honan are apparently his next immediate goals, while the Yangtze Provinces are due to follow.

China's two courageous generals of the day are under Tsao K'un. Wu Pei-fu has become the idol of the people since his historical victory over the Anfuists. To get rid of Wu is imperative to Chang's success. The spirit of solidarity among the troops of Feng Yu-shiang is another source of anxiety to Chang. To control Feng therefore is again essential.

Both Wu and Feng and their forces are now in Honan—Wu in Loyang, West Honan, and Feng in Sanyangchow, South Honan. Chang Tso-lin wants his own man in Honan. Chao Ti, present Tsuchun of this province, is too diplomatic to be of any use to him. Once controlling Kaifeng, Chang can not only cut off Wu and Feng from their supporters, but also one from the other.

SHANTUNG ESSENTIAL

Shantung is important to Chang, of course, because of its railroad facilities. Tien Chung-yu, the Tsuchun, has shown no favorable inclination towards Chang and Chang is worried. So a change of the Tsuchunship in Shantung is another item on Chang's program.

When these two provinces are placed under his thumb, Chang will have no difficulty in controlling the Yangtze by the ap-

RED REVOLT IN GERMAN CITIES FAST DYING OUT

SILESIA IS QUIET

Economic Commission Certain Teutons Are Able To Pay

(Reuters Service)

Berlin, March 25.—There are indications that the authorities are getting the upper hand of the Communist rebels in Prussian Saxony. At Elstern the police rejected the overtures of the Communist leader for a cessation of hostilities and eventually succeeded in securing full control of the town, after sharp fighting in which machine guns were used. The police also occupied Heisdorf after a violent conflict, but the Communists, estimated to be 6,000 strong with plenty of arms and ammunition, are in possession of the large nitrogen works of Leuna, near Halle.

Paris, March 25.—The Inter-Allied Commission in Upper Silesia has issued a proclamation to the inhabitants, acknowledging the fact that peace and order prevailed to a remarkable degree throughout the holding of the plebiscite but pointing out that certain elements have now allowed themselves to be induced to provoke disorders in various districts. The Commission has accordingly ordered martial law to be proclaimed in Beuthen, town and environs, Kattowitz town and environs, and the district of Pless, where the agitation is most virulent.

M. Korfanty, Chairman of the Polish Plebiscite Committee, is about to issue an appeal to his fellow-countrymen "to remain calm in the face of German provocations."

PRESS JOYFUL

The Polish press hails with joy the results of the Upper Silesian plebiscite—which shows an absolute Polish majority in the mining district. The newspapers refute the assumption of their German contemporaries that the district cannot be allotted to Poland.

In this connection, the Kurjer Warszawski, the leading daily of the country, remarks that although the Germans were in a majority in the towns, that does not alter the fact that the general complexion of such regions as Posenia is indisputably Polish. The German numerical majority, the journal asserts, is in fact purely fictitious, being exclusively made up of officials and Germanic elements imported into the country.

London, March 25.—Authoritative quarters in London regard the Communist outbreaks in Germany without apprehension, all apparently being sporadic and not serious.

Paris, March 24.—A French semi-official Note, commenting on the German refusal to pay the 12,000,000,000 gold marks due by May 1 to cover the cost of the Armies of Occupation, says:

CONTINUE PRESSURE

"Such a deliberate violation of the essential clauses of the Peace Treaty cannot but confirm the Allies in their resolution to continue to apply the sanctions until all the questions pending with Germany have been satisfactorily settled."

Paris, March 24.—The reply of the Reparations Commission to the German note refusing to pay the 12,000,000,000 gold marks due by May 1 to cover the cost of the armies of occupation, and rejecting the Allies' estimate of German deliveries, points out that the Commission alone is empowered to fix the value of payments.

The Commission further says that in claiming 1,000,000,000 gold marks of the unpaid balance by March 23 it acted on the certainty it had gained that Germany possesses realisable assets sufficient for payment of the amount.

TEACHER SAYS HE WAS TRICKED BY TWO CHINESE

Sought To Help Friends Collect Debt; They Searched For Opium

That he had been "double-crossed" by his two Chinese companions, that he had merely been a party to the impersonation of police officers so as to "give face" to his Chinese friends mission at debt-collecting, was the defense of Winfield W. Woodbury, the American teacher, in the United States Court for China yesterday. Woodbury had been arrested with two Chinese charged with posing as a Municipal policeman, and with illegally searching a Chinese dwelling house at 376 Chekiang road on Wednesday night.

Woodbury was trying to help his new-found Chinese friends, Mr. L. W. Hartigan, his attorney, said. His presence was to "give face," and nothing more. But these two friends, according to the prosecution, immediately upon gaining entrance, on Woodbury's "face" proceeded to rifle and ransack the premises for opium. They announced that they had come for opium. They said not a word about the $400 which Woodbury believed he was to help, by giving face, toward collecting.

Many witnesses were called, including foreign and Chinese police, and the occupants of the house. The story told was that Woodbury, as well as the others had participated in the searching. The wife of the Chinese tenant was the principal witness for the prosecution. She was in the search room during the whole operation. The sixty dollars which she maintained had been stolen, was found later on one of the Chinese. During the police search at the station. Woodbury explained his possession of his 45 calibre revolver by advising that he understood "hanghai" is "a rough place."

The hearing was continued at 1 p.m. until tomorrow at 11:30 a.m.

Indian Duties On Cotton Raised For Revenue Purposes

(Reuter's Service)

London, March 25.—The Secretary of State for India, Mr. E. S. Montagu, today received a deputation of the Lancashire Cotton Trade in connection with the provision in the Indian Budget, passed this week by the Legislative Assembly at Delhi, for an increase from 7½ percent to 13 percent of the ad valorem duty on imports, including cotton goods.

Mr. Montagu told the delegation that the increased duty was not aimed at Lancashire but was necessary for revenue purposes. He expressed the opinion that the future fiscal policy of India, based on the recommendations of the Tariff Commission of India, would be protective, because India was nearly wholly in favor of protection. Nevertheless, the duties were at present dictated by the sternest financial necessity.

The Secretary of State for India said he hoped that India would demonstrate solidarity with the British Empire, and use her fiscal liberty to take a stand on the system adopted by the Dominions and Great Britain, but it would be a profound mistake of imperial statesmanship to force imperial preference on India.

Mr. Montagu declared that the Imperial Government were determined to give the Government of India the right to consider the interests of India first. The well-being promoted between Great Britain and India by letting India have her own fiscal way would result in greater trade between the two countries, Mr. Montagu considered.

In conclusion the Secretary of State promised to convey the views of the deputation to India, and to see that a statement of the difficulties besetting the Lancashire cotton trade was widely disseminated in India. He hoped that this would have an immediate effect.

London, March 23 (delayed).—Replying to a question by Sir William Joynson-Hicks in the House of Commons today, Mr. Montagu (Secretary for India) stated that, on his recommendation, the Prime Minister had decided to submit the military requirements of India to a sub-committee of the Committee of Imperial Defence. Pending the decision of this committee, the Indian Army would not be further reduced.

CUNNINGHAM RETURNS

United States Consul-General Edwin S. Cunningham and Carl L. Seltz returned to Shanghai last night, coming from Woosung by special tender from the Empress of Russia, which arrived from Vancouver shortly after midnight. Dr. N. L. Downs also arrived from America.

Mr. Seltz comes from Washington where he has been working in the interests of the new incorporation bill for American firms in China. He represented the American Chamber of Commerce here. Mr. Cunningham and Dr. Downs are returning from vacation.

Smiles from the Mixed Court

The charge sheet stated that Daung Teh-lob, classified as a blacksmith, had feloniously entered premises at 568 Nanking Road and had, still more feloniously, extracted therefrom an electric meter, property of the Municipality.

In support thereof, appeared Ong Dal, carpenter engaged in repair work upon the building mentioned, who reported to the Magistrate and Assessor that he had seen Daung sneak into the house. When the meter was discovered missing he suspected Daung immediately and shortly thereafter the Chinese detective entrusted with this case, ran down the worthy smith, ransacked his repair basket and rooted the meter out from beneath a fresco of horses and other plausible camouflage.

Daung told the Court that the accusation against him had grown out of a misconception of circumstances which he would undertake to make clear, setting things to rights. While walking along the street, he said, he had met a man who invited him into this place and paradoxically requested him to sleep there and sort of keep an eye on things. Daung said he acceded to the request and was actively engaged in fulfilling the first half of it when the meter fell off the wall and came clattering down next to his bed. Beholding himself of his host's injunction about looking after the property, he placed the meter in his basket and was taking it away home for safe keeping when the police became meddlesome.

The Court listened to Daung's explanation with every evidence of interest and then arranged for a six weeks' stay in lodgings where there is practically nothing to face off the wall.

WAUNG IS PERPLEXED

Madame Woo Lok-sz was proceeding along the Fokien Road the other day, resplendent in her afternoon frock and wearing her holiday ornaments, when she felt a twitch at her collar and reached up to find that one of her pearl studded hairpins was gone. Turning round she saw a man loping down the street, so she lifted the war-whoop and took up the trail. A Sikh Constable caught the yodel and, seeing the fleeing Chinaman, gave chase. The pursuit ran through half a dozen alleyways—so the Sikh told the Mixed Court Magistrate next day—and wound up with the policeman straddling Waung Ah-loong and extracting the hairpin from his fist.

"It's a conspired (or such-and-such) libel," protested Waung. "I was in a watch shop buying a timepiece when I thought I heard a police whistle blow. So I went outside and I saw a man running and I thought to myself, there must be a fire somewhere, and I followed him and the first thing I knew there was a policeman sitting across my neck and he said I'd stolen a gold ornament that he said he'd taken out of my hand. That's all I know about it. I must have grabbed the hairpin when I fell." Waung has six months to ransack his memory for other theories.

DZUNG REGISTERS PROTEST

It is against the local regulations for a mafao to slumber on the box. Therefore, when the Chinese Police Constable allocated to the corner of Ningpo and Kiangse Roads had his meditations disrupted by a series of distracting noises, he went over and aroused Deng Ah-yong and took him to the station.

"I wasn't asleep," Deng told the Magistrate. "It must have been the small mafao. I've got a pair of sore eyes, as your honor will see if he looks closely, and the C. P. C. coming up thought that because I had my eyes closed and was growling I was dead to the world."

Daung offered to bring in all his family to prove that he had been having trouble with his optics but the Court told him that it wouldn't be necessary and that if he would pay the clerk $1 as he went out the incident would be considered closed.

Troops In Hupeh To Be Disbanded

(Staff Wire To THE CHINA PRESS)

Hankow, March 22.—An official notice has been published by Tschun Wang Chuan-yuan announcing that plans have been perfected to disband the superfluous troops of Hupeh. All those who volunteer to be disbanded from the ranks will be paid a special allowance of one month's pay.

The notice says in part: "Since the resumption of civil strife, the government treasuries have all been exhausted, and the government has been almost in a hopeless financial state. Now that internal union is nearly in sight and internal warfare has been stopped, it is high time to promote industries and to allow the country to recuperate slowly. Hence the disbandment of troops."

London, March 24.—Lord Lytton, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for India, announced in the House of Lords today that the British Government had no official information of the terms of the Russo-Afghan treaty, the signature of which was announced by the Moscow wireless on March 3, but the Government did not intend to enter into an Anglo-Afghan treaty until the terms of the Russo-Afghan treaty had been revealed.

disadvantage for Chang Ching-hui to proceed to Urga.

STRANGE MOVE

Another strange move on the part of Chang Tso-lin is the sudden recommendation by him of General Wu Pei-fu and Feng Yu-shiang to head the expedition to Urga. Having completed his plans for a coup, Chang now makes this recommendation. If Wu and Feng agree, they will be cut away from their supplies and reinforcements. If they do not, they will be accused of disloyalty.

Wu and Feng, it is reported, have definitely refused to go to Urga for the present, in spite of the fact that both of them offered to proceed there at the early stages of the conflict. The action of Wu and Feng is probably taken under instructions of Tiao Kun, because with the Fengtien troops on three sides of his sphere of influence, Tiao, also an ambitious man, is not likely to allow his crack lieutenants to forsake him at this moment.

The report expresses the opinion that the cost of living will be reduced to 60 percent above the pre-war level by the end of the year.

MARK SET HERE IN FAMINE DRIVE NOT YET REACHED

reach the people for whom it was intended.

In lieu of this they have offered to subscribe among themselves a sum equivalent to the tax which would accrue during the next year and to turn this over to the famine relief committee. The sending of a special emissary to Shanghai to adjust the matter has resulted in nothing further. And in keeping with this offer the merchants here have already indicated their willingness to give $45,000. The sum of $90,000 is their estimate of the total of the surtax of one year and they state that they are willing to raise this amount if Peking will exempt Shanghai from the assessment. And, if this tax is waived, they say, there is no doubt but that local Chinese will come readily to the front with voluntary subscriptions to the famine fund.

COMMITTEES WORK HARD

Officials of the local drive committee have been worriedly exerting themselves toward the attainment of the goal which they have set, but to date it has been a question of individual endeavor. The various other committees and organizations which have sprung into being since the emergency arose have also been doing their best, and for the most part have met with the same lackadaisical, phlegmatic sort of response. There has been much good work done and a number of encouraging subscriptions have been brought in. But as the great port city of China Shanghai has appeared in a very poor light.

Peking has subscribed over $850,000. Shanghai's actual collections during the drive will hardly notch $100,000—with a million set as the mark for two weeks' solicitation. The town has five days left in which to reach that figure and the organization here is bending every effort to make the prediction an actuality. It is up to the community to come forward during this week.

Last reports from Peking stated that a total of over $850,000 had been raised there in the drive, including recent gifts from the Ministry of the Interior and the T'ung Hua College, and expressed the belief that the ultimate total will exceed $2,500,000.

Canton has wired that $70,000 has already been raised there, $17,000 of which has been remitted to the Peking Drive Committee.

Reports to the Peking committee indicate that the drive has aroused great enthusiasm in the larger cities throughout the length and breadth of the land. The estimate of funds raised to date, based on figures reported to Peking from various cities which have joined in the drive is $5,275,000.

Thus far the banks in Peking have received the sum of $343,663.59 and the Salt Gabelle has paid over $500,000. Of this total $840,700 has been paid out to the International Famine Relief Committee.

Woman Is Killed In Armed Robbery

Man Also Is Shot In Raid
On Boone Road
Dwelling

A Chinese woman was killed and a man seriously wounded in an armed robbery at 870 Boone Road last night when two men entered the place and held up the inmates.

The affair occurred shortly after 7 p.m. One of the robbers entered a room where five or six people were having dinner and demanded the jewelry worn by the women, while a second man with two automatic pistols in his hands kept guard at the door. One of the diners, named Chang Pau-doo sprang at the guard and seized one of the pistols, while the robber discharged the other weapon into his chest. As Chang fell he retained his grasp of the pistol—a .32 calibre Browning—and this is in possession on the police. The other robber meantime had stripped two pair of bangles from the women and as he retreated toward the door fired a number of shots, one of which struck a woman named Wong Zo-size below the left eye. The woman died on the way to hospital and the wounded man is said to be in a critical condition at St. Luke's Hospital.

News Brevities

The Ministry of Communications denies the report in the Chinese papers that laborers on the Peking-Hankow Railway threaten to strike if their demand for increase of pay is not granted.

The first issue of The Jewish Communal Recorder edited by Rabbi W. Hirsch, appeared in Shanghai Friday and will be published fortnightly hereafter, its special purpose being to link the Jewish people of Shanghai into closer fellowship and to record happenings of interest to the Jewish community. It contains notices from the three synagogues in the city, announcements from religious organizations, and a children's section offering prizes for essays and ability to give scripture passages. The publication has taken up as its special cause the establishment of a Jewish library for Shanghai.

On behalf of the Canadian Presbyterian missionaries in Honan, Mrs. D. MacGillivray, 3 Darroch Road, wishes to acknowledge with thanks the following sums for famine relief, two friends, $100. Not fourteen, $5; S.O.B., $20; Dr. James Woods, Tsingkiangpu, $25; A friend, $25; Gwallior Mission, India, $25; 74, and American Friends, per B. C. Patterson, D. D., $4,431.68, and Miss Frances Boyce, $80.

The Jewish Girls' Club, recently organized by leading Jewish women of Shanghai, will hold its first dance at the Palace Hotel on April third. Three classes have been formed by the members, the music class being conducted on Mondays and Wednesdays by Mrs. Hoorin, the millinery class on Tuesdays and Thursdays by Mrs. Rotschild, and the shorthand and typewriting class on alternate Thursdays by Miss Fuxman and Miss Levy. The organization expects to secure permanent quarters in the near future.

A Purim Play, organized by Abraham, Erra and Benjamin Nair, will take place in the Jewish School at four o'clock this afternoon. The Purim Festival, which was celebrated yesterday in the three synagogues of Shanghai, commemorates the deliverance of the Hebrews from the plot of Haman and the execution of the man who attempted to destroy them. As the Jewish people are commanded to present gifts to the poor during this period, a special appeal has been issued by Rabbi W. Hirsch on behalf of the China Famine Fund.

An election of the President and Committees for the Liengyih

Benevolent Association will take place at its premises 1175-1182 Wuchow Road, Hongkew, on April third.

Eight journalists representing Chinese papers in Hankow left yesterday morning to attend the Conference of Far Eastern Journalists, which will take place in Tokio in April. Prior to the departure of the representatives, many social gatherings took place between Chinese and Japanese newspapermen in Hankow.

Martial law has been declared along the Peking-Suiyuan Railway in view of the Urga situation. Wang Chen-ping, in command of the 13th division, has been ordered by Teao Kun, to guard the line.

The Peking administration has approached Mr. Frederick W. Stevens, representative of the American Banking Group for a loan under the pretext that the fund was to be used for the relief of Urga. Mr. Stevens has agreed to discuss the matter with the European representatives.

Two aeroplanes on their way to Mukden in compliance with the order of Chang Tso-lien were burned while in the railway cars. It is suspected that the planes were purposely destroyed in order to prevent them from falling into the hands of the Fengtien tuchuu.

Dr. J. Q. Dealey of Brown University will speak to the women of the American College Club on Tuesday, March 29. Supper will be served at 6 p.m. to be followed at 7:15 by Dr. Dealey's talk. The Western Returned Students' Union will hold a tiffin at the Union Club on Friday at noon.

Mr. Yang Teheng, former Special Envoy of Foreign Affairs at Shanghai, has declined the nomination of the local Overseas Chinese Association to become Minister to Siam.

The lottery shops in the French Concession, which were ordered to be closed recently, are being removed to Chinese territory. A number of them have already opened on the Boulevard des deux Republiques.

Chapel residents have demanded the installation of extra hydrants along the streets. It is complained that there is always shortage of water whenever there is a fire in Chapel.

General Chen Chung-ming has ordered the prohibition of gambling and the frequenting of sing song girl houses by officials in Canton.

Easter services will be held aboard the U.S.S. Elcano at 10:15 o'clock this morning. The speaker will be Dr. J. V. Scott. Special Easter music will be rendered by Miss Douglass and Dr. Scott.

There will be an Easter song service at the Navy "Y" this evening at 7:30. Mr. John Geldart will be the speaker.

A Presidential mandate dated March 24, appointed Yeh Kung-cho, Minister of Communications, president of the new University of Communications, of which the Nanyang College of Shanghai is a department.

The Diplomatic Corps has addressed a protest against the return to Peking of Prince Tuan, the advocate of the Boxer doctrines. Prince Tuan was banished to Turkestan under the stipulation of the treaty of peace after the rebellion. He recently returned to Peking without previously obtaining the consent of the Diplomatic body in Peking.

Reverend C. G. Gowman of the China Inland Mission, Taku, Yunnan, will conduct the regular meeting for prayer for missionary work tomorrow at 5:15 p.m. at the Union Church Hall. For the past nine years, Mr. Gowman has been working among the Li-su tribes of Yunnan, whose life and conditions are practically unknown to the outside world. Mr. Gowman was one of the missionaries captured by bandits at the time that Dr. Shelton of Batany was kidnapped.

Miners Turn Down Owners' Proposal

(Reuter's Service)
London, March 24.—The Miners' Delegate Conference today decided to reject the coal owners' proposals for a wages settlement on a district basis, and to adhere to the demand for a national wages board.

Members of the Miners' Executive afterwards declared that the decision would involve a national stoppage on April 1, unless the Government intervened.

WHAT OTHER REFINERIES HAVE DONE

We are informed that the following figures are true:—

Ponca City Refinery; started six years ago on small capital; assets now better than a million.

Little Skimming Plant at Stock Yards, Oklahoma City; more than pays for itself every thirty days.

Wichita Valley Refinery of Iowa Park; more than pays its original cost each sixty days.

Waters-Pierce Oil Company; from 1900 to 1915 made an average of over 500 per cent. net profit per year on a capital of $400,000.

Ardmore Refinery, Ardmore, Okla.; paid $3,400 for every $100 invested.

Texas Refining Company; started a few years ago with small capital; today has a capital of $75,000,000.

Eighty-four refineries in Oklahoma; from an official report sixteen of them earn 100 to 200 per cent. annually; the rest, 200 to 800 per cent. annually.

Don't let this opportunity go without looking into it. Mr. Raven will be glad to give you detailed information at any time. Call on him or ask him to call on you. Tel. Central 3840.

U.S. TO RECEIVE SOVIET'S TRADE DELEGATION SOON

No Technical Barriers Will Be Raised To Resumption Of Relations

(Reuter's Service) Washington, March 23.—The State Department has received a note from the Moscow Soviet appealing for a resumption of trade relations.

It is understood that the State Department, which has completed a thorough analysis of the Anglo-Russian Trade Agreement, will probably consent to receive a Soviet delegation that no technical barriers are likely to be raised by the United States to the resumption of trade with Russia, and that there is no objection to America receiving gold which bears the mint mark of any recognized Government.

Barcelona, March 24.—At today's meeting of the International Communications Conference, China asked that the railways of East China should be excluded from the operation of the draft Convention until a stable government had been established in Russia. It was decided however that the case was covered by the provisions of article 11 which settles relations with States which do not adhere to the Convention.

Washington, March 25.—In the course of a message which he has sent to the Soviet representative at Reval, Secretary of State Hughes states that a resumption of trade relations between the United States and Russia will depend on satisfactory assurances being given by Russia that fundamental changes are contemplated, involving due regard for the protection of persons and property, and the establishment of the maintenance of commerce.

Prof. Dealey Lectures

Before a large gathering at the Kiangsu Educational Association, yesterday afternoon Prof. J. Q. Dealey spoke on "The Teacher in a Republic." He says there is a great future before the Chinese Republic if the schools and colleges were taught by teachers of high intellectual and moral qualifications because the development of a nation's resources depends on the application of scientific principles to economic life. He believes that education merits a considerable proportion of the nation's expenditures and that in the long run education will be a saving of administrative expenses because when the citizens generally receive a practical education, vices and physical ills will diminish and accidents involving material losses will likewise decrease. Hence less police, hospitals, etc.

He strongly advocates a liberal system of remuneration for the teachers who, he urges, deserve more substantial public recognition but he says the teachers must work to deserve such treatment by keeping their knowledge up-to-date and by making their training thoroughly practical. "Education," adds Prof. Dealey, "is conducive to the productive powers of a country but it is wrong to regard financial success as an end of education for the real aim of education is to train up citizens to lead wise, virtuous and happy lives and to do each his or her part in democratizing the whole country."

Prof. Dealey will leave for Hangchow shortly and will give a second lecture at the Kiangsu Educational Association on Saturday, April 9. His subject will then be: "The Social Application of John Hay's 'Open Door' Policy."

American Officials Call On Tsuchun Lu

United States Consul-in-Charge Mahlon F. Perkins of Shanghai and Willis R. Peck, Chinese Secretary at the United States Legation in Peking, made an official call yesterday on General Lu Yung-hsiang, Tsuchun of Chikang, yesterday at Hangchow. The American officials returned to Shanghai last night.

Shanghai College Notes

Word has just come from New York that gifts have come in for two new foreign residences, and also $50,000 gold for the new woman's building. Work on the residence has already been begun, and the plans for the woman's building are being drawn. It will be built on the new campus not far from the river front and as the money appropriated for it is more than the cost of any other building on the campus it will probably be the finest of all. This will help to give the right kind of a start to co-education.

The new science building is now up to the second story. Frost and rain have greatly hindered the progress of the work so far but it is hoped from now on that more speedy advance will be made. The building will be ready in September and promises to be one of the best equipped and most up-to-date science halls in China.

Professor Harris H. Wilder, who lectured on Biology at Shanghai College during the spring term last year, and who was so busy catching frogs, fishes, and salamanders, of which he took several barrels full with him, now reports that he succeeded in bringing to America three species thus far unrepresented in any American museum, and one of these is a new species. This was a Japanese form, presented to him in Kobe by Dr. Kimura, the Dean of Kobe College, and Professor Wilder has named it Hynobius kimurai. One of the others, the Triturus orientalis, was collected by Professor Wilder at Hangchow, on the way from Lake Si Wu to the great Buddhist temple of Ling In; the other one, Pachytriton sinensis, was given to Professor Wilder by Dr. Arthur Stanley of Shanghai.

Shanghai College has obtained new light on many subjects the past week, owing to the successful installation of the new electric power plant, giving electric lights in all the buildings and residences. The students showed such curiosity in the workings of the power plant and as there seemed to be danger of their mobbing the engineer in their anxiety to learn the working secrets of the dynamo, it was thought necessary to charge an admission fee of one dollar. Since then the attendance has fallen off considerably. The Board of Managers held its regular annual meeting at the college on Friday and Saturday. Among those present were Doctor Frank Rawlinson, Dr. J. T. Proctor, Rev. E. H. Cressy, of Hangchow, Rev. E. F. Tatum, of Yangchow, Rev. H. H. MacMillan, of Soochow, Rev. P. W. Hamlett, Rev. J. M. Rogers, Rev. T. C. Wu, and Mr. R. D. Stanford. Shanghai College is a union institution under the Southern Baptist Board, whose headquarters are in Richmond, Va., and the Northern Baptist Board, whose headquarters are in New York. Missionaries of both denominations in China are on the local Board of Managers.

French Exports Now More Than Imports

(French Wireless through Reuter) Paris, March 25.—The balance of trade has now turned in France's favor. This was only to be expected, in view of the January export and import figures, and the general tendency of the trade situation.

Statistics just issued by the Customs Administration show:—
Jan. and Feb. 1921
Imports ... 3,596,000,000 francs
Exports ... 13,682,000,000 francs
Jan. and Feb. 1920
Imports ... 5,646,000,000 francs
Exports ... 2,758,000,000 francs
Imports of foodstuffs decreased 744,000,000 francs, of raw materials 741,000,000 francs, and of manufactured articles 555,000,000 francs, as compared with the first two months of 1920, while exports of foodstuffs increased 31,000,000 francs, of raw materials 260,000,000 francs, of manufactured articles 638,000,000 francs, and of parcels post 45,000,000 francs. Exports of manufactured articles in February alone amounted to 101,000,000 francs.

E. B. ROSE SAILS FROM YOKOHAMA ON FUSHIMI MARU

Attorney Wanted Here On Embezzlement Charge Goes To Victoria

Mr. Earl B. Rose, former prominent local American attorney who is charged with embezzlement, sailed from Yokohama Friday on the Fushimi Maru, according to reports received here yesterday. Efforts had been made by the American authorities here through the American Embassy and Yokohama Consulate to have Mr. Rose returned to Shanghai for trial from Japan. Failing this, the local officials are turning their activities toward the arrest of the departed lawyer when he lands at Victoria or Seattle. They have expressed their belief that he will be returned to Shanghai to answer the charges brought against him.

5 Accused In Wall Str. Bomb Blast

(U. S. Navy Radio through Reuter) New Orleans, March 24.—Five men said to be wanted in connection with the great Wall Street explosion of last year, have been brought here on board the Shipping Board's steamer Rushville from Rio de Janeiro. It is stated that the men were arrested last month on board the Shipping Board's steamer City of Alton, after a terrific fight. Washington, March 25.—Chief Detective Flynn of the Department of Justice said that no evidence had been discovered to connect the five men who have been brought to New Orleans from Rio de Janeiro with the Wall Street explosion, but that investigation was still being made. The arrest of the men followed a mutiny on board the City of Alton, Detective Flynn explained.

BIG MAIL IN TODAY

A small mail reached the United States Post Office yesterday, four sacks of first-class matter and some score of sacks of second class matter arriving by the West Nivaria.

The steamer Empress of Russia brings 1,108 sacks of mail to Shanghai today. The next mail to leave Shanghai for the States will be closed on April 2, when the Empress of Asia leaves for Vancouver. No mail for America will go on the Colombia today.

James, Cardinal Gibbons Is Dead

lug Edward J. Stearns' reply, "Faith of Our Forefathers." After serving for a time in Richmond, Virginia, the churchman succeeded James R. Bayley as Archbishop of Baltimore. In June, 1886, Pope Leo XIII vested him with the red hat and gave him the title of Santa Maria Trastevere. Despite his high position in the church, Cardinal Gibbons was never guilty of flaunting his titles or office, remaining throughout his life the same simple, kindly man who was ordained priest sixty years ago.

Cardinal Gibbons' interest in public questions was first exhibited in a nation-wide scale when he took up the cause of the Knights of Labor, changing the attitude of the Catholic Church toward the organization. His interest in labor questions has been unflagging, and he has done as much as any one individual to convince the working man that organized religion and capitalism are not necessarily blood brothers. His conference with Samuel Compers and other labor leaders have been given considerable publicity.

STAND ON PROHIBITION

During recent years Cardinal Gibbons precipitated a widespread controversy by his attitude toward prohibition. Always on the side against reforms that threatened their own ends by being ill-timed, Cardinal Gibbons maintained that in order to avoid a violent reaction, strong liquors should be prohibited first, allowing the elimination of light wines and beers to follow in due time if found advisable. This stand raised a storm of protest among churchmen of opposing faiths, and yet many believe that all the evidence seems to point that should, indeed, have been the better plan, and it cannot be gainsaid that there is a section of public opinion in America convinced that the suddenness of prohibition is defeating the chief ends it sought to accomplish.

Whatever the stand of the Holy See during the war, Cardinal Gibbons stood staunchly on the side of the Allies, doing much to help in the call for volunteers and in the sale of U. S. government securities.

A great churchman, a great statesman, a distinguished man of letters and a wholehearted American passed with the death of James Cardinal Gibbons. The red robes bestowed by the church had its counterpart in the mantle of affection with which Catholics of America surrounded the person of their beloved priest.

Opium Policy In India To Stand

(Reuter's Service)

London, March 23 (delayed).—In the House of Commons today, Sir J. D. Rees asked the following question: "In view of the fact that there appears to have been an extensive recrudescence of poppy-growing in the Provinces of Fukien and Yunnan, and that, owing to the disorder in China, many other Provinces are also drifting back to the situation preceding the Opium Treaties, is it proposed to continue the opium policy of India whereby the people of India are taxed more, highly, and the people of China reap no advantage?"

Mr. Montagu (Secretary for India) replied that it was not proposed to change the opium policy of the Raj as the result of the recrudescence of poppy cultivation in China. The matter was now covered by the Hague Convention, under which the Chinese Government prohibited the import of opium, the Indian Government was bound to prevent the export of Indian opium to China.

Religious War In India Acute

(Reuter's Service)

Delhi, March 23.—The position is still acute as regards the religious troubles connected with the shrines in the Punjab (which troubles gave rise to the fighting between Sikh merchants and pilgrims at the shrine of Nankana Sahib reported by cable a month ago). The Sikhs are now divided into two camps. The orthodox party are in possession of the shrines, from which the reform party desire to expel them, after abuses, and wrongful waste of temple funds. Serious excuses have been committed, resulting in many arrests. The Punjab Government, after consulting the leaders of the respective camps, has decided to bring in legislation for the formation of a body, similar to the Charity Commissioners in Great Britain, to control the shrines in future.

Tsingtao Summer Seminary for Young Women

There is not a more ideal place for health, recreation, and study advantages in the Orient, than the picturesque heights of Tsingtao. This city of exhilaration is within easy reach of all important centers of the Far East, being located within a few days of delightful steamship sailing of Manila, Hongkong, Java, Japan, Vladivostok, less than two days from Shanghai and Dairen, and provided with excellent train de luxe service from Peking and Tientsin. It is well named the Palm Beach of the new world. Its enticing atmosphere and scenery entrances every visitor from the first glimpse caught of its prospect of white buildings and abundant stretches of restful sandy beach. Rocks and coves abound, providing nooks for picnics, rest for adventure, and charming cozy places for quiet reading and meditation out of reach of folks and parties, but within a few minutes' walk of all these diversions when the mood changes and nature craves for joyous living.

The program of the camp has been thoughtfully arranged, and facilities for camping, picnicking, and motoring have all been provided with particular care that the numerous places of interest and of historical significance can be explored and studied to the heart's content. Good roads are plentiful, and motors are provided for day visits and week-end jaunts to Linshoutai, J. I. Tuen, She Tze Kwo, Kin Shuei, Dan Shan, Lou Shan, Hwei Chuan, etc.

The kitchen department is excellently managed by a corps of cooks and assistants, who will be allowed a full store of provisions in order that the most vigorous appetites may be satisfied with healthful and strengthening food.

The Music Department will be in charge of a graduate of the Petrograd Conservatory of music, and elementary or advanced instruction will be given to those who wish to take advantage of the holiday time to continue their studies in music, and in the meantime enjoy the looked for and necessary vacation.

A Physical Director has been engaged who will have personal charge of physical exercises—basket-ball, volley-ball, tennis, etc., assuring expert supervision.

Provision has also been made for religious exercise, and the life of the summer seminary will be that of a refined Christian home free from sectarian bias and restrictions. Religious services are held every Sunday and Protestant girls are required to attend. Young ladies of the Catholic faith are urged to attend the services conducted in the near-by Convent.

A more healthful and beautiful location for the combination of educational privileges and invigorating pleasure could scarcely be found.

For particulars, address Mrs. Walter Flewelling, Dean of Summer Seminary, University Preparatory Academy, Tsingtao.

GERMANS LAND JOUHAUX CHARGE

Fresh Labor Chief Blames Own Government For Delay in Reconstruction

LUXEMBURG REDS DIVIDE Russian Agent Demands Indemnity For Killing Of Four Prisoners

(New York Times)
Charges by Leon Jouhaux, President of the General Confederation of Labor of France, to the effect that the reconstruction of the devastated districts of Northern France has been greatly handicapped through the failure of the French Government seriously to try to enter into an arrangement with the German Government and labor unions whereby German labor could have been used for this work, are welcomed by the German press as a justification of the Germans' willingness to try to make good some of the havoc wrought by their troops during the war.

In his article, which was printed in L'Atelier, the French trade union organ, and quoted from in the Berlin Vorwarts of Dec. 30, M. Jouhaux tells of a trip he made to Berlin in November, together with Edo Fimmen of Holland and C. Mariens of Belgium, both officials of the International Federation of Trade Unions, to talk with German trade union leaders about the possibility of yet using German labor for reconstruction work. He insists that French contractors interested in making big profits out of the task of rebuilding the homes of the victims of the German invaders are deliberately blocking the reconstruction plan sponsored by the French and German unions. M. Jouhaux's article reads in part as follows:

"Our comrades in Germany expressly declared that they regarded it as their duty to take part in the work of reconstruction, and they were ready to present themselves for this work. We, for our part, declared that the French workers were ready to accept their co-operation and that we felt that the guarantees that they demanded were just and necessary in view of the trade union rights, the freedom of movement and the application of social laws that they enjoyed in their own country. And these are not empty promises. (Then M. Jouhaux tells of the beginning of negotiations in January, 1919, between the French Government and unions and the German Government and unions, and declares they came to naught through the fault of the French authorities.)

"Our visit to Germany, we declare flatly, has furnished us with fresh confirmation of the facts regarding the special interests that are always to the front here and that are exploiting the welfare of the public.

"The contractors, jealous of the war profits of their colleagues in the metal industry and of the middle men in the food industry, regard the devastated districts as their own. It is a 'cake' that they don't want to divide with any one. German co-operation with labor power, with building materials, with money, would have reduced their share.

"We point out that it would have been possible to have restored them (the devastated departments) quickly and without giving the exploiters of the excavation and construction work an excuse for exorbitant profits. Nothing in this sense has been done. Nevertheless we believe that in no case must one flinch before this greediness and these efforts. And in Berlin we resolved to turn to the national and international labor organizations, to issue an appeal to the inhabitants of the unfortunate districts, to inform the public and to show that it (German aid in reconstruction) is for the interest of not only the districts in question, but also of all Europe and of all nations that are in danger of collapsing, or are threatened by the same danger."

More than 100,000,000 working days were lost by some 9,000,000 strikers during the first six months of 1920, according to data compiled in London and found in the German press. The number of strikers and days lost, respectively, in Germany were 1,866,350 and 18,201,640; in Italy, 1,781,230 and 21,650,300; in France, 1,186,670 and 19,358,100; in Sweden, 180,070 and 4,779,170; in Spain 224,700 and 11,630,100; in England, 117,040 and 6,925,900; in the United States, 958,700 and 11,787,400; in Australia, 203,400 and 7,602,000; in Belgium, 176,940 and 2,090,440, and in Austria, 97,540 and 902,900. These figures do not include political strikes.

By a vote of 97 to 21 the delegates to a national convention of the Luxembourg Social Democratic Party adopted a resolution favoring conditional affiliation with the Third (Communist) International, said a Luxembourg dispatch to the Frankfurter Zeitung. When the twenty-one delegates favoring unconditional acceptance of the famous twenty-one points of the Moscow program saw themselves in the minority they bolted the convention and organized a Communist Party. Clara Zetkin, the German Communist leader, asked the convention to accept the Moscow conditions, but her eloquence was in vain.

Reports from Warsaw found in the Berner Tagwacht are to the effect that the Central Committee of the Jewish Socialist Party of Poland and Lithuania (The Bund) has declined to accept the Moscow conditions of affiliation, and has decided to try to negotiate with the Executive Committee of the Third International over their possible modification.

A Wolff Telegraph Bureau dispatch of Jan. 3 from Helsingfors said that copies of the treaty of peace between Russia and Finland, signed Oct. 14 at Dorpat, had been exchanged in Moscow on Dec. 29, putting the terms of the treaty immediately into effect.

On Dec. 30 ratifications of the provisional German-Hungarian commercial treaty were exchanged in Budapest, according to a dispatch from that city to the Frankfurter Zeitung. The treaty contains the most-favored nation clause and also provides for the exchange of the railroad rolling stock belonging to one country and located in the other. It runs for three months and will be renewed automatically.

Before leaving Berlin for Moscow on a mission said to deal with the probable recognition of the Soviet Government of Russia by the German Government, Vigdor Kopp, the Soviet representative in Germany, sent a sharp note to the Foreign Office, according to the Freiheit of Jan. 2, demanding compensation for the families of four Russian prisoners of war shot to death during the last half of December while attempting to escape from internment camps. M. Kopp pointed out that unless this were done and the regulations of the camps modified, the Russian Government would not be likely to carry out its recently announced intention of hastening the repatriation of the last Germans remaining in Soviet Russia.

The amnesty decree announced on Christmas Day by Admiral Horthy, Regent of Hungary, only covers about 1,000 persons, including all the members of the reactionary organization known as the "Awakening Magyars," according to statements made by Hungarian Social Democratic leaders quoted in a Vienna dispatch of Dec. 30 to the Frankfurter Zeitung. Very few of the some 30,000 labor men incarcerated in jails and internment camps on suspicion of having aided the Bela Kun regime in 1919 are affected by the amnesty.

All the trade unions of the Sarre Valley have asked the Governing Commission of the district to allow the extension to that territory of the German Shop Councils law and the regulation covering the work of arbitration boards, says a Wolff Bureau dispatch sent from Saarbrücken on Dec. 29.

HANKOW WATER SUPPLY

(Staff Wire To THE CHINA PRESS)

Hankow, March 21.—The problem of water supply in the city of Wuchang has been resurrected by the coming of the new Civil Governor, Mr. Liu Tsien-shan, who has already appointed one of his trusted officials to form a Wuchang Water Supply Company with a capital of $1,200,000, which sum will be raised from official and civilian sources. But this time the civil governor insists that no foreign loan will be resorted to in this important enterprise.

Packers To Cut Wages One Eighth

(U. S. Navy Radio through Reuter) Washington, March 24.—Employees of packing houses have signed an agreement to accept wage reductions approximating 12½ percent. The new wage scale corresponds to the scale put into effect by the packers on March 7. The agreement provides for an extension of the war time arbitration agreement until September 15.

ASSASSIN OF WANG SEIZED IN HANKOW, REPORT HERE SAYS

Unconfirmed Message Tells Of Arrest Of Man Who Shot Southern Leader

According to an unconfirmed report, the assassin of General Wang Wen-hua, who was shot to death in a motor car outside the Yih Ping Shang Hotel two weeks ago, has been arrested in Hankow.

The Shanghai police authorities have sent a representative to the Yangtze river city to investigate and to bring the prisoner back if the report is true.

The man who is supposed to have killed the former Southern military leader registered at the hotel as Woo Yung-an, a dealer in medicines from Szechuen, the province in which Wang was formerly an active military official.

Sinn Feiners Try To Empty Bastille

(Reuter's Service)

London, March 24.—An attempted repetition of the storming of the Bastille on a somewhat smaller scale occurred at Cork yesterday evening. It was just before the curfew hour and the streets were crowded, when the "Southern Battalion" of the Republican Army proceeded to develop an elaborately worked out scheme, formed a cordon round the prison, dismantled the telegraphs and telephones, and imperiously commanded the terrified people in the vicinity to lie down in the streets and not to move.

The Republicans next threw rope ladders over the prison walls to which the prisoners, including a number of criminals condemned to death, should, by prearrangement, have rushed, but the patrol arrangements inside the prison prevented the materialisation of the scheme, and the Republicans speedily decamped.

Hangchow Y.M.C.A. Gets New Members

(China Press Correspondence)

Hangchow, March 26.—The eighth membership campaign of the Hangchow Young Men's Christian Association closed Wednesday night. The goal set for membership, 1,600, was exceeded by 390. Nearly $15,000 was secured instead of the $12,000 aimed at.

Eight teams bearing the names of the eight sections of Hangchow's Great Street took part in the campaign. The first, second, and third prizes for number of points secured were won by Messrs. Hsia Din-he, Tsang Hsueh-zen, and Wu Chin-san, respectively. Mr. Hsia is Commissioner of Police and, concurrently, Chief of the Constabulary for this province. Mr. Tsang Hsueh-zen is vice manager of the Wu Fong Bank. Mr. Wu Chin-san is chief secretary to the Civil Governor.

The first, second, and third prizes for the highest number of members secured were won by Mr. K. W. Chu, engineer on the S. H. N. Railway, Mr. Wu Diao-yang, member of the General Staff of the first Army Division, and Rev. R. J. McMullen, D. D.

Six Provinces In Unification Move

(China Press Correspondence)

Peking, March 24.—What may be considered an important step toward China's unification is the announcement from Governmental headquarters of the alliance created by the six Provinces of Hupeh, Hunan, Kiangsi, Szechuan, Yunnan and Kwelchow.

This alliance, due chiefly to the efforts of General Wang Chuan-yuan, Military Governor of Hupeh (who is generally regarded as the dean of the participating group), is especially gratifying to the Central Government, because, while the policy of the different Provinces is for self-government in all local or provincial affairs, concerning which they are prepared to resist outside interference by force, matters of a national nature will be referred to Peking.

Since several of the Military Governors of the Provinces involved are loyal to the North, and can be relied upon to stand fast, this new alliance tends to so isolate the Province of Kwangtung as to prevent the Canton Government from assuming future importance.

Among other questions discussed at the conference of the different Provinces' representatives were those of improving the people's living conditions; the discharge of surplus troops; new sources of revenue; the removal of political rivalry between the various parties; the drafting of provincial constitutions, and the development of commercial and industrial enterprises.

Ex-Civil Governor Of Changsha Now Living In Hankow

(Staff Wire To THE CHINA PRESS)

Hankow, March 21.—The political runaway from Changsha, Hunan province, Mr. Lin Tze-yu, who recently left the post of civil governor with a resignation to the Changsha Provincial Assembly, is now living in a foreign concession of Hankow. Last week some of his political opponents of Hunan have come down to Hankow to urge Lin to return to Changsha to clear up the entangled accounts of his civil administration.

Mr. Lin's decision to leave the political life at Changsha was brought by the difficulties he found himself in with the various partisans in Hunan and also by the difficulty to carry on a government almost barren of any revenue. It is understood that Mr. Lin will soon leave Hankow for Shanghai.

Chinese Churches Observing Easter

Joining with worshippers of other nationalities in commemorating the most important feast of the Christian year, the 14,000 Chinese of Shanghai will observe Easter today by special services of music and prayer. There are thirty-three Chinese Protestant churches in Shanghai, besides six of the Catholic faith. Long practice and patient training in mission schools has given many Chinese in Shanghai the ability to render sacred music as well as many foreign choirs and has raised congregational singing far above the mediocrity of noise common in Chinese country churches. Chinese choirs have been rehearsing all week for today's special music, and decorations ranging from the bright red that expresses Oriental joy to the pure white used in Christian liturgical worship have been prepared in honor of the holy day.

The following program of service arranged for the Church of Our Savior is typical of the order of worship in other Chinese churches:

Hymns—121, 161
"Lord Have Mercy Upon Us"
"Glory be to Thee, O God!"
Hymns—160, 43
Baptismal service
Sermon
"Alleluia"
"When Jesus Comes"—Played by the Brass Band
Hymns 152, 122.

GREEKS BEGIN WAR

(Reuter's Service)

London, March 25.—Both Greeks and Turks are announcing successes in connection with the Greek offensive in the vilayet of Smyrna.

Constantinople officially claims that the Turks have captured 1,700 prisoners and 20 guns. This is flatly contradicted by the Greek Legation here, which announces that, on the contrary, the Greeks are advancing on the Ushak and Brussa fronts—on the latter front to a depth of 12 miles—and that the Turks are retreating in disorder.

Athens, March 24.—News of the opening of the Greek offensive against the Turkish Nationalists in the Smyrna region is confirmed. The Greek commander has issued a proclamation calling on his troops finally to crush "the barbarian forces."

Paris, March 24.—President Millerand yesterday received the members of the Turkish delegations to the London (Near East) Conference.

Ex-Army Officer Accused Of Murder

(U. S. Navy Radio through Reuter)

New York, March 24.—Robert Rosenbluth, ex-Captain of the 213th Engineers, has been arrested on a charge of murder, in connection with the death of Major (?) Cronkite, son of Major General (?) Cronkite, at Camp Lewis in October, 1918.

The Camp Board of Inquiry at the time returned a verdict of 'accidental death.'

Rosenbluth was director of the Philips Pine Forest Investigation in 1911.

Detectives Who Arrested Bergdoll Get 15 Months Each

(U. S. Navy Radio through Reuter)

Mosbach, Baden, March 23.—The American detectives Karl Neuf of Baltimore, and Franz Zimmer, or Zimmermann, of Denver, who were arrested by the German police at Eberbach, in Baden, at the end of January, for attempting to kidnap Grover Bergdoll, the American millionaire 'slacker,' have been sentenced by the Criminal Court to 15 months' imprisonment for "illegal assumption of authority" in attempting the abduction of Bergdoll.

Four German accomplices of Neuf and Zimmer have been sentenced to terms of imprisonment ranging from five to 11 months.

A WOMAN'S MESSAGE TO WOMEN FROM SALT LAKE CITY

Mrs. May Feeney who lives at 45 Gregory Place, Salt Lake City, Utah, U.S.A., recently made the following statement for the guidance of others of her sex. She said:—

"I was so nervous that I did not care to go about and felt everything upset me. My heart beat irregularly and worry over this increased my nervousness. I was weak and rundown and suffered from frequent headaches. My appetite was poor and I had severe indigestion pains, especially after my breakfast."

"Several years ago I had given Dr. Williams' pink pills to my daughter and they helped her so much I decided to try them. I was benefited almost from the very first. I took the pills for six weeks. My nervousness disappeared and my whole system seemed to be benefited. My appetite is good, the headaches have disappeared, I sleep well and feel better in every way than I have in a long time. I strongly recommend Dr. Williams' pink pills."

To build up the blood and nerves there is one remedy that has been a household word for a generation. Dr. Williams' pink pills for pale people. These pills tone up the entire system, make the blood rich and red, strengthen the nerves, increase the appetite put color in the cheeks and lips, and drive away that unnatural tired feeling. Good wholesome food and fresh air will do the rest. Begin Dr. Williams' pink pills today: you can get them from chemists, or direct from Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., 98 Szechuen Road, Shanghai.

American Woman's Club

The date of the evening bridge party to be given by the Social Department of the American Woman's Club has been set for April twentieth at the Columbia Country Club. The guests are to include gentlemen as well as members. Mrs. Percy L. Bryant, Mrs. William Morris, and Mrs. W. A. B. Nichols will be the hostesses of the occasion.

A party of American Woman's Club members left for Hangchow last Thursday for an Easter holiday trip directed by the Literary Department. The group will visit shrines, temples, monasteries and ancient landmarks of the city, in order to study them from the historic and artistic standpoints.

Ballots for the general election of April fifth have been sent to club members by the Nominating Committee and a list of candidates compiled from the returns. The names will be presented by the committee at the April fifth meeting, members also having the privilege of nominating from the floor.

The most important club event of the week is the open meeting of the Music Department, to be held at the Carlton Cafe next Thursday afternoon. A study of the sonata will be the subject of the meeting, to be illustrated on the piano by Professor Harry Ore. Miss Frances Webster Adams, of the Shanghai American School will give a digest of the history of this type of composition.

PRINCE TO PLAY VIOLIN

Concert To Aid German Monarchist Group Stirrs Radicals
Berlin, Feb. 3.—A former prince will tickle the ears of polite Germany here Monday when he appears in a violin recital for the benefit of the campaign purse of the Nationalist Party, Germany's extreme monarchist group.
Friedrich Wilhelm von Preussen, a cousin of the former Kaiser and a brother of Joachim Albrecht, is the new Royalist virtuoso.
The radical element here declares it would not be so bad if the Prince were to play for charity or to enrich his own coffers, but hesitates to accept the idea of his playing to aid re-establishment of the monarchy without protest.

Japanese Buying Cattle In China

(China Press Correspondence)

Peking, March 24.—An enterprise recently launched by the Japanese is that of an association known as the Japanese Asiatic Cattle Importing Company, financed by the Japanese banks of Tsingtao in Shantung. With a capital of $5,000,000 Chinese currency, the ultimate purpose of this company, it is stated, is the purchase of 300,000 head of cattle, for which they are paying $80.00 per head, regardless of breed or condition; the high price offering a ready inducement to the Chinese farmers to part with their stock.

The report is that all of the healthy cattle are shipped to Japan; the impoverished animals being slaughtered and canned for export to foreign countries. Owing to fear of opposition through public opinion, the original plan of the promoters, to establish buying agencies throughout the five famine-stricken provinces of China, was abandoned. Twenty Shantung men, to whom is paid a high commission, are said to be negotiating the cattle-buying.

R.R. Construction Will Be Resumed

(China Press Correspondence)

Peking, March 24.—Announcement is made that construction is to be resumed on the much talked of uncompleted portion of the Canton-Hankow railway, a party of engineers being already in the field for the purpose of locating the line, which it is estimated will require about a year. Mr. C. J. Carroll, the American engineer-in-chief of the I-Kwei section of the Szechuan-Hankow Railway, who is acting in consultation with the Chief Engineer of the Canton-Hankow Line, returned recently from a reconnaissance of the unfinished gap, covering a distance of approximately 270 miles.

The Ministry of Communications, it is authentically reported, has appropriated $400,000 per month for the completion of the Hupeh-Hunan section of the Canton-Hankow Railway, a distance of approximately 75 miles. The funds are to be furnished jointly by the four lines of the Chinese Government Railways now operating—the Peking-Hankow, the Peking-Suiyuan, the Peking-Mukden, and the Tientsin-Pukow. According to present plans location will have progressed sufficiently that actual construction may be started on May 1, of this year.

Press Conference Slated For October

(China Press Correspondence)

Peking, March 24.—Of interest to not only newspaper men, but to the news-reading public at large, is the fact that definite arrangements have been completed for the convention of the Press Congress of the World in Honolulu, October 4 to 14 of this year. Dr. Walter Williams, Dean of the School of Journalism, of the University of Missouri, who is president of the Press Congress of the World, will preside.

It is hoped that this meeting of press representatives from all parts of the world may create such a spirit of getting-together and co-operation, as to result in the establishment and maintenance of a central news station at Honolulu, whereby news dispatches may be relayed direct to the various countries bordering on the Pacific as well as to any other country desiring news of any particular nature. Java, it is understood, has expressed herself as being very anxious to unite with other countries in such a newspaper distribution point at Honolulu—the Cross roads of the Pacific.

Anfuites Renewing Activity, Report

(Staff Wire To THE CHINA PRESS)

Hankow, March 25.—Confidential reports have been received at the Tsuchun's yamen in Wuchang relative to the former members of the Anfu Club renewing their activities in the Yangtze Valley. Branch organizations have been reestablished in Kiangsu and Hupeh, and still others will soon be reopened in Nanchang.

It is reported that Hsu Shu-tseng or Little Hsu, leader of the Anfu ring, has advanced large funds for reviving the Anfu Club. Secret arrangements are said to have been made with certain military officials in Kiangsu and similar arrangements for assistance, according to the local Japanese newspapers, will soon be made in Kiangsu and Hupeh, as well as other provinces along the Yangtze.

Jap Journalists Guests At Dinner

(China Press Correspondence)

Hankow, March 24.—The Wuhai Journalists Club composed of Chinese newspaper men of Hankow and Wuchang, entertained Japanese journalists, officials and business men in Hankow at a dinner last Sunday in return for a banquet given by the Japanese to the Wuhai Chinese journalists some time previous. Besides the editors of local Japanese papers and correspondents in Hankow for Tokyo papers, there were present the president of the Japanese Chamber of Commerce, the Japanese Consul-General at Hankow and managers of all the important Japanese firms in Hankow.

NEVER DRUG A CLOGGED LIVER—IT ONLY NEEDS CLEANSING

A Sluggish, Congested Liver is always made worse by frequent dosings with strong cathartic drugs. This merely irritates the liver and bowels to temporary, violent and convulsive action, only to leave them weaker than ever, like whipping a tired horse. Instead, use something more natural and lasting. Try the pleasant-tasting medicinal drink produced by dissolving Aikia Saltrates (powder form) in plain water. Eminent medical men, after subjecting this treatment to the most thorough tests, have pronounced it to be the equal of any ever perfected for cleansing, stimulating and regulating the liver. Similar both in composition and effects to the medicinal water of famous hot springs. All chemists keep Aikia Saltrates in stock. Get a few ounces today for trial. Its cost is very low. Drink a tumblerful of this medicinal water occasionally and see how easy it is to break the pill habit and rid yourself of biliousness, lassitude, headache, skin troubles, or any other disorders due to retention of impurities in the system. You can thus enjoy full bodily and mental efficiency at all times.

NOTE.—We are informed that Messrs. A. S. Watson & Co. of 18 Mark Lane Road, Shanghai, stock a specially high grade of Aikia Saltrates and are in a position to supply this remarkable compound at very low cost.

Europe's Debt And Our Own

An Argument For Canceling Obligations, Both For Ethical Reasons And To Protect Our Exports

The writer of this article was born in England of American parents, went to school in Germany and was for many years a partner in the banking house of Lazard Freres in New York. He joined the firm in New York as a partner in 1901, having become an employee in its San Francisco office in 1877. Four years ago he retired from business. He is the author of "The American Revolution in Our School Text Books" and "German Militarism and Its Critics."

By CHARLES ALTSCHUL
(New York Times)

At the outbreak of the great war men throughout the world stood aghast at the frightful possibilities the future had in store. In our country, the meaning and possible effect of the catastrophe were not realized in the least; we failed to grasp that it would be impossible to escape becoming involved. Public opinion crystallized very slowly. Even after we had entered the conflict, there were many who at first indulged in the expectation that our sole contribution would consist of money and war material.

Looking back, it seems difficult to understand why our people did not realize at once our war as well as that of the Allies. The treacherous invasion of Belgium, in acknowledged disregard of treaty obligations, and the peace terms suggested by Germany—early as 1915—when they considered themselves victors, left no doubt of the contemplated changes in the map of Europe, and of the utter ruin which would overtake the Allies, if Germany should prevail.

Even after the sinking of the Lusitania on May 7, 1915, with more than two hundred Americans on board, we still thought that we could keep out of the struggle, though the country was thoroughly aroused by this German infamy. It dawned very slowly upon our people that if America stayed out of the great war, and Germany won, America would forthwith be required to defend herself, and would be unable to defend herself, against the same lust for conquest, the same will to dominate the world which had made Europe a bloody shambles. (Elliott Root speech in Chicago, Sept. 14, 1917.)

As we did enter the war, after Germany's final submarine challenge, we threw ourselves wholeheartedly into the struggle, and quickly abandoned long-cherished traditions—the selective service law was passed within six weeks after the declaration of war. Not only our financial resources, but our own flesh and blood, were thus pledged to protect the world from the menace of Teutonic domination. And when the armistice was finally signed, the different peoples who had fought side by side for the protection of their highest ideals felt closer to each other and seemed more alive to each other's welfare than ever before. There seemed to arise from the smoke of battle at least this comforting idea, that prejudice had been overcome, old animosities removed and a basis found for reciprocally gratifying intercourse in the future. The world was filled with extravagant hopes and the dawn of a better day seemed in sight.

The tragedy of it all is that this brighter prospect was soon obscured. Among Germany's opponents renewed animosities, jealousies and loss of faith again developed—all fanned by an insidious propaganda similar to that which had misled the judgment of our people prior to our entry into the war. And now, barely two years after the signing of the armistice, one is forced to the conclusion that the idealistic picture conjured up during the last days of the conflict has vanished, and that the dreams and hopes of the masses are not to come true. Each country seems intent on following its own immediate interests in utter disregard of those broader and more far-reaching considerations which alone can favorably affect the intercourse among nations.

Should this tendency continue unchecked, it is not difficult to imagine that a complete disruption of the political systems of the Old World and continued warfare would result.

It may still be possible to invoke again the glorious, broad-minded and humanitarian spirit which hovered over the lands of the victors at the close of the war. In face of the appalling alternative, even the feeblest effort in that direction may seem warranted.

The American Expeditionary Forces reached Europe at a very critical time. The Allies had already undergone three years of terrible fighting and were thoroughly worn out; they had held the penny at bay a long time, although the torments of war had swayed to and fro; they had suffered heavily in killed and wounded and had strained their resources to the breaking point. While we were still making up our minds where our duty lay, they had blasted the road along which they and we finally fought our way to victory. The English Navy, too, had displayed constant activity; it had kept all the lanes of ocean travel open from the outset and had facilitated the shipment of enormous quantities of war material and other supplies which we had sold to the Allies at considerable advantage to ourselves. As soon as we were ready, it assisted very greatly in transporting our troops to Europe. The Allies have borne testimony, ungrudgingly and enthusiastically, to the vital assistance we rendered them in their hour of need; it is for us to appraise the relative value of our contribution to the common cause. The tables herewith are intended to assist in this and to invite comparison between our sacrifices and those of the principal powers associated with us in the war.

Does it really seem as if we, the richest and most powerful nation of all, had done all that might be expected in view of the common danger? Do we not owe it to ourselves to stand by with every ounce of our strength until the general situation is stabilized? Do we not in all fairness owe it to the Allies to see that their financial and economic situation is fortified so that they may freely devote themselves to overcoming the ravages of the war? Is not an equitable adjustment due them after they faced the storm and onslaught for three harrowing years and stood between us and the Teuton menace?

It was not the duty of France alone to protect her frontiers; it was not the duty of Britain alone to come to the rescue of her neighbor. Their geographical proximity to the aggressors should not have singled them out as the defenders of all we ourselves held sacred. The conflict which arrayed nearly all the civilized countries against the Central Powers did not become our affair merely after a certain date; it was ours from the beginning. Surely our duty is not ended nor a balance ready to be struck! Think alone of the loss of men's lives among the Allies—an entire generation practically wiped out—and it will become clear that a generous nation like ours cannot withdraw without first making every possible additional sacrifice consistent with national safety to equalize the load resting upon the shoulders of all who fought at our side.

The first important contribution to the discussion of post-war conditions was Mr. Keynes' "The Economic Consequences of the Peace." No matter how one may criticize his pro-German bias or his emphasis of Mr. Wilson's fourteen points, no matter whether one agrees with his conclusions or not, his book has had the unquestioned merit that it forced into the limelight those features of the Peace Treaty with which it deals. His two outstanding recommendations are the fixing of a reasonable amount to be exacted from Germany by way of reparation—which every well-informed person has long considered essential—and the entire cancellation of inter-ally indebtedness incurred for the purposes of the war.

This second proposal, which was first put forward by others, but was sponsored by Keynes and only thereby called to general attention, has been dismissed in this country with scant consideration. "Congress would never consent" and similar expressions have been used to brush it aside. But the reactions of Congress are often of finance and affairs expert. If the people showed a disposition to be more loyal to their associates in the war or more generous than our leading men have been, Congress would follow any courageous lead in that direction. A few voices have been raised in favor of the Keynes proposal, but they have been drowned by the general outcry against it. It is not a popular move to ask the public to add to the load it already carries. Nevertheless, the argument is morally and economically sound; the future of the entire world may depend upon its being understood and approved.

As one of its essential features, Keynes' plan provides that the United States cancel approximately ten billion dollars lent to the Allies, of which one-half is the amount owed us by Great Britain, thus making it possible for Great Britain to cancel loans of about nine billion dollars and France loans of about one and three-quarters billion dollars made by them. The net result of all this would be that the United States would surrender ten billions, Great Britain four and one-half billions, while France would gain about three and one-half billions, Italy four billions, and the other Allies various smaller sums. It is clear beyond question that such an arrangement would relieve the debtor countries greatly, and would vastly improve the chances of revival of normal business intercourse in the world at large. The great creditor nation of the world, the United States would have generously assumed an added burden—but a burden which we alone are able to stand.

The question is, will we do our share? Would it really be generosity or would it be enlightened self-interest if we consented to wipe off the slate all loans made to our associates for the purposes of the war—England and France doing likewise?

These loans were made at the time, and granted in the manner they were, because it seemed the quickest way to obtain result; and in those trying times every day counted. Our readiness to contribute financial support to the cause cannot be questioned; in case of need, we would have granted it to any of the countries arrayed with us against the Central Powers. It was due to expediency alone that our advances were not more largely scattered and that today our principal claims are against Great Britain and France.

There can be no repayment by any of the countries indebted to us in any reasonable length of time; they simply cannot afford it. At best, the loans will have to be funded, spread over a long period, with very easy payments for interest and amortization. Even then, the load will seriously impede the free economic development of the Allies in the future, and from time to time will greatly disturb the exchange markets of the world. We are not only vitally interested in avoiding this, but we should strain every nerve to remedy the demoralization already existing. And this for the reason that continued weakness in foreign exchange acts as a direct stimulus to imports into this country, while it immeasurably checks free exports. Whatever we want to sell abroad is made costlier for the foreign consumer, and whatever is manufactured abroad can be laid down here at correspondingly lower prices expressed in our currency. Unless this situation is remedied, the result must be that our export trade will languish just so soon as Europe no longer depends on us alone for her urgent needs. We must then be prepared for a sharp reaction in agricultural and industrial enterprise, and in trade generally, with consequent unemployment and all the misery this involves.

The problem has, however, still another aspect. Had we entered the war sooner—and it is surely no longer difficult to plead that we should have done so—our assistance would unquestionably have brought it to an earlier close, and the financial burdens would then have been quite differently distributed. We should have had more on our shoulders; our associates correspondingly less. Are they to be penalized for this? Are we not willing to waive our claim against those who suffered most because they were nearest at hand, and who defended us in defending themselves? We cannot give them back their dead, who fell for us too, but we can at least brighten their future by relieving them of responsibilities which will weigh on them for generations.

From an economic point of view, it will be much the best, in the long run, if we wipe these

Where Freedom He stood with grieved and questioning eyes,
Where Freedom drove its chariot to disaster
And tollers heard, unheeding, tollers' cries.
Where man withheld God's bounties from his neighbor,
And fertile fields were sterilised by greed.
Where Labor's hand was lifted against labor,
And suffering serfs to despots turned when freed.
Majestic rose tall steeple after steeple;
Imperious bells called worshippers to prayer;
But as they passed, the faces of the people
Were marred by envy, anger and despair.
"Christ the Redeemer of the world has risen,
Peace and good will," so rang the major strain.
But forth from sweatshops, tenement and prison
Walled minor protests, redolent with pain.
Methought about the Master, all unseeing,
Fought desperate hosts of striking clan with clan,
Their primal purpose, meant for labor's freeing,
Sunk in vindictive hate of man for man.
Pretentious Wealth, in unearned robes of beauty,
Flung Want a pittance from her bulging purse,
While ill-paid Toil went on dull rounds of duty,
Hell in her heart, and on her lips a curse.
Then spoke the Christ (so wondrous was my vision), (Deep, deep, His voice, with sorrow's cadence fraught)
"This world today would be a realm elysian,
Had my disciples lived the love I taught.
Un-Christlike is the Christian creed men fashion,
Who kneel to worship, and who rise to slay.
Profane pretenders of my holy Passion,
Ye call Me newly to the cross each day."

At a recent conference a speaker referred to the old type of Gospel hymn in which men are described as worms, and quoted the couplet:
I am only a miserable worm
Blowing the Gospel trumpet.

Why is it that certain hymns are in such wearisome demand? Is it because of the tune, or from the mere love of old, familiar things? Archbishop Temple used to say that whenever he opened a new church or presided at a dedication service he always could reckon on two things: "The

16 NEW CAPITAL SHIPS

The eight-eight program provides that Japan must have eight superdreadnaughts and eight battlecruisers all less than eight years old. Many writers have been assuming that this program included at least four of the grations for war were at their greatest momentum. The total imperial revenues were estimated at 3,496 million marks. Of this amount 1,092 million marks were set aside for the army and navy together, or 31 percent of the total as compared to Japan's 50.1 percent set aside for armaments in the coming year. The German army claimed 772 million marks, or 24.9 of the total. This is higher than the estimates for the Japanese army in the coming year, which claim only 16.8 percent of the total revenues. But the naval budgets furnish the most interesting comparison. Germany in 1914-15 set aside

1.1 PERCENT FOR BRITAIN

The British Naval Estimates for 1920-21 called for £15,790,100 sterling for new construction, including the building of naval aviation material. This is only 1.1 percent of the annual income of the United Kingdom. The following table summarizes this comparison:

Proportion of National Income Allocated to New Naval Construction
Japan	19.1 percent.
United States	1.8 percent.
United Kingdom . . .	1.1 percent.

Riches For The Children

BY DR. WM. A. McKEEVER
(Professor in the University of Kansas and a Well-Known Educator)

How definitely shall we tell our half-grown children about the family income? How can we keep our boy modest and self-reliant if we tell him that some day he will inherit a comfortable life annuity? How can we teach thrift and business success to our children when we are consuming every dollar of the family income for our immediate living expenses? That is, how can we preach success to our children when we are conspicuously not a success ourselves?

There is one general and very necessary answer to this two-pointed question: Teach your child to go it alone, to walk on his own feet, to learn to pay his own way through life.

Wealthy parents—those who expect to leave considerable money to their children—will do well to use caution in making such a fact known to their half-grown boys and girls.

Only in so far as he has self-acquired wealth of character can your boy or girl make any valuable use of the money he may in time inherit from his parents. And then he may need a very little of such help.

"Son, your dad is poor in possession of this world's goods, but he is the square thing by his family. My condition must not bind you in one way or another. Nearly every man of wealth in this country came from a poor or a modestly provided parenthood. That must have nothing to do with your life. It will neither hinder nor help you.

"You alone can, and will, hinder or help yourself. Your good health, your honesty, your determination, your patience—these rightly considered, are the tools with which you will create your own good character and finally your own economic wealth. Go to it, my boy! Rich dad or poor dad, what is that to you?"

Talk to your boy or girl substantially as above. Keep out of his head the very thought of "falling back" on his parents' wealth or stumbling over their poverty. He must learn to be self-sustaining or lose the whole chance of a good life.

Japan's Naval Plans Claim Huge Part Of Income

In the United States is about 1,500 million yen, or about 23 times the Japanese appropriation; while the annual amount set aside for public education in Great Britain is about 500 million yen, or nine times that in Japan. Mr. Ozaki's figures are approximately correct, although the figure he gives for the United States is just about equal to that for 1921-22, a war year. It is probably considerably higher for the current year. In the British civil service estimates for 1920-21 the sum of $56 millions is set aside for public education, which is approximately Mr. Ozaki's 500 million yen.

The appropriation for education in the Japanese budget for 1921-22 is approximately $6 million yen. This is 10.4 percent of the total naval appropriation and 18 percent of the amount set aside for new naval construction. In other words Japan intends to spend more than five times as much for new warships in 1921-22 as she will spend on her entire public school system in the same year.

U.S. EDUCATION & WARSHIPS. Meanwhile, assuming that the United States will spend at least as much in 1921-22 on public schools as she did in 1917-18 America will pay out in the coming year about $650,000,000 for public education and at the same time only $90,000,000 for new naval construction. She will spend at least seven times as much for education as for new warships; Japan will put five times as much into new warships as into the education of her youth. This takes into account only public education, and it should be borne in mind that Japan has no system of private schools that can compare with the great institutions all over the United States into which many more millions of dollars go every year.

When the proportion of new warship construction appropriate tions to expenditures for public education is taken into account, it appears that the naval expansion scheme of Japan is thirty-five times as ambitious as that of the United States.

THE COASTLINE ARGUMENT

Premier Hara spoke of the navy as a defense for Japan's coast and commerce. Taking the protection of coastline as a justification for naval power, Japan can on this one point lay claim to the necessity of building as large a navy as the American. The Japanese Empire, with its many islands of ragged outline, does present a longer coastline than that of Continental United States. But to argue that this entitles Japan to as large a navy as the United States leaves out of account several important facts. One is that more than half of Japan's seacoast fronts on what is practically closed water from which Japan can shut any hostile sea force. The Sea of Japan is in fact as in name a Japanese sea. Rodjstvensky tried to enter it and Togo annihilated him in the one decisive major naval operation of the Twentieth Century. On the Pacific side alone is Japan vulnerable to attack. The coastline argument also ignores the fact that the unprotected part of Japan's coast is 4,500 miles removed from the nearest naval Power of the first rank. This is nearly twice far removed from danger as any other Great Power.

JAPANESE TAX BURDEN

If it were possible to obtain accurate figures on the percentage of the income of the average Japanese that goes into the Imperial treasury in taxes of one form or another and to compare that with the percentage paid by the American citizen to his various governments—federal, state and local—this comparison would give a still more vivid idea of the comparative burdens which naval expansion is placing upon the Japanese and American peoples. The Japanese lives much closer to the margin of existence than the American; it is also certain that he suffers far more heavily from taxation than the American.

A comparison of the ratios of naval expansion programs to national wealth would present the Japanese naval effort in a still more ambitious light. During the next year, as the foregoing figures have shown, Japan probably will spend half as much again as the United States for building new warships. And yet it is a very optimistic Japanese who would claim for his Empire one-tenth of the wealth and resources that belong to the American Republic.

WHAT AMERICA COULD BUILD

To show how ambitious is the Japanese scheme of naval expansion it may be useful to show what America would build were she to put the same proportion of her resources into warship construction that Japan is putting forth. America's national income, that is, the income of the Federal Government, is a little more than eight times that of Japan. Instead of Japan's eight-year program, she would build a 64-64 program on that basis—she would have a battle fleet of 128 ships equal to or more powerful than the great British battle-cruiser Hood.

The United States has a mercantile marine fleet four times that of Japan. On this basis, if Japan must build her eight-eight fleet, the United States ought to have a navy of at least 64 new capital ships.

BASIS OF FOREIGN TRADE

The United States has a foreign trade six times as great as that of Japan. Therefore, Americans might argue, as the "irreducible minimum" consistent with national safety—a favorite phrase of Japanese leaders discussing the eight-eight program—America must have a 48-48 grand fleet of the first line, with all smaller craft and auxiliaries in proportion.

The foregoing figures and comparisons furnish a background against which the statements of Japanese ministers and diplomats do not appear so plausible. It will be interesting to quote some of them here.

Baron Hayashi, the Japanese Ambassador to London, in an interview given out at the end of December, was quoted as saying: "Japan must complete her program of eight big battleships and eight big battle cruisers. Even when that scheme is completed the strength of the Japanese Navy will be half that of the United States."

AMBASSADOR'S STATEMENT

Again on January 7, Baron Hayashi was interviewed by the Daily Telegraph in London. On that occasion he declared that when both programs are completed (the Japanese and American) the United States will have at least double as many capital ships as the island Empire. A comparison of the probable naval forces of seven years hence will show that Baron Hayashi was understating the probable relative strength of his country's naval forces.

Admiral Baron Kato, the Minister of the Navy, declared in Tokyo in December that "the eight and eight program must be carried out."

Premier Hara gave an interview to The Japan Advertiser on January 20, in the course of which he said: "Japan is simply executing an old program. It is to defend our coasts and commerce—nothing more. Our experts have decided that our present force is insufficient for this. Hence we must keep building."

"ONLY FOR DEFENSE"

Speaking to the same correspondent, Marquis Okuma, former Prime Minister of Japan, on January 5 declared that Japan's navy was relatively too small to be considered in the same class with the British or American. "Japan continues building," he said, "but for purely defensive purposes. No nation need fear Japan's navy."

In the same vein Viscount Ishii, the Japanese Ambassador to France, is quoted in an interview given to the New York Evening Post from Paris on January 9. "Viscount Ishii quoted figures to show that the Japanese Navy is now and probably will remain far inferior to that of the United States," this correspondent wrote.

Then there is the statement made on New Year's Day by General Baron Tanaka, the Minister of War: "In the present world situation disarmament or curtail-advances entirely off our book; from an ethical point of view, it will not be an act of generosity, but the expression of a just realization that there are certain obligations which should not and will not be forgotten.

Europe's Debt And Our Own

This program would probably meet with quicker and more general acceptance were it not for the impression that such a concession would react against us, and for the mistaken belief that the two countries principally concerned are following a line of political conduct which should deprive them of our support. It may be possible to remove some of this misapprehension.

France, insisting on a more faithful compliance with the terms of the Treaty of Versailles than others who had confronted Germany might expect, is now days often charged with imperialism, and therefore no longer deemed entitled to our full sympathy. Unless one is unduly influenced by her chauvinistic press—which should not be taken any more seriously than our own yellow journals—it is impossible to reach such a conclusion. None should reproach her for still giving heed to the advice of her military leaders; it would be folly were she to do otherwise. None should expect her to let matters drift in her colonial possessions, where she is merely fortifying herself against the danger of graver and more perplexing problems.

France has lived under the shadow of the German menace for a very long time; she has had to submit to great humiliations in order to live in peace. When the armistice was concluded, her future safety did not seem to her assured, and she made great concessions in the final peace terms only because of the promise of Anglo-American support were she ever to be attacked again. We all know that there is no chance, for the time being, that the contemplated treaty for the protection of France will be signed. She is now faced with a situation where she has made concessions but has been deprived of their counterbalance. Who can deny her the right to insist on "Safety First"? To expect otherwise is to camouflage the entire proceedings at Versailles. It is well enough for people to philosophize who live beyond the immediate reach of Germany, but to the Frenchman whose frontier with the German this close proximity is a source of constant dread.

Had the spirit of the French protective treaty been preserved, we would be justified in asking France to yield on the questions which have lately stirred up trouble in connection with the Treaty of Versailles, but until some equivalent is given her for that upon which she had a perfect right to rely, we should be very patient with her attitude. She is entitled to that feeling of confidence which the protective treaty would have given her; it is in the interest of all that she be so protected. Should her frontiers continue exposed as they were in 1914, it merely means a renewed menace to the whole world.

France is laboring under great irritation—the lands of her enemy have escaped invasion; there are no devastated regions east of the Rhine. The traveler crosses the Rhine to find the fields, the vineyards, the orchards, and the villages in a flourishing condition. Yet, the guarantee which was to protect France against the ravages of another attack has become intangible. The two countries which were to stand back of her in such an emergency—Great Britain and the United States—have withdrawn for the present, either from self-interest or from a lack of understanding of this situation, and it seems to her, expect concessions from her in order that they may the sooner revive business with the former enemy.

Once the problem of her safety for the future is solved, France will be found as reasonable and conciliatory as any one could wish; her leaders know that her vital interest lie in that direction. The question is not as readily disposed of where it affects Great Britain because we have been educated to look upon everything British through distorting spectacles, and are unduly influenced by the constant political agitation that pervades our country owing to the unfortunate conditions in Ireland. We take altogether too little trouble to sift truth from fiction where Britain is concerned.

And so we take stock in the talk that Britain has gained all the advantage from the war and is going to gobble up everything in sight. It is true, the German fleet is no more, and Britain can breathe freely in that respect; in fact, one should expect that this would incline her the more to sympathize with the fears of France. But the other advantages gained by her are coupled with very serious new responsibilities. These new interests are not of her seeking. Representative Englishmen would be glad to have America assume a full share of the burden of supervising these regions outside of Europe severed from the German and Turkish Empires. They would much prefer, having regard for their own sphere of control to such territories as are essential to the safety of the empire. To the United States was given every opportunity to assume one or more of the mandates suggested by the Peace Conference, but we declined, for reasons which the great majority of our people seems to have approved. Whether right or wrong we chose our policy, and we certainly should not nurse a grievance against Great Britain because she felt compelled to assume control over vast stretches of country which lie on the road to her domains—a responsibility which is bound to be source of exceeding worry and expense for many years to come.

Then, again, we hear that Britain is securing the oil market and the oil reserves away from us. The United States produces nearly 65,000,000 tons a year, while the entire British Empire has an annual output of only 2,000,000. J. T. Smith, editor of Oil News, London, in The Landmark, December, 1920, If we find it necessary to look around for new sources of supply, can we find fault with Britain for doing the same?

And what about the frequent criticism of British naval policy? Great Britain's justification for a large navy is far greater than ours; we are self-supporting and self-contained, while it is a question of life and death for the British to keep their sea communications open. Yet excitement runs high whenever the old charge is reiterated that Britain has stricken down every navy which had successfully competed with her own and that she is now casting envious eyes upon our naval progress. What Britain did in the far east does not now concern us. The erroneous impression now current is easily traced to German propaganda, because at a time when the German mercantile marine had risen from 1,240,182 tons in 1888 to 3,153,724 in 1913 [Dr. Karl Helfferich's "Germany's Economic Progress"] the Germans already claimed that their trade was being choked off by the English. The German mercantile marine, and, for that matter, the German Navy, could never have developed as they did had not British ports and coaling stations all over the world been open to their ships on even terms with British vessels. In that respect Britain has always shown far greater liberality than any other nation.

Again, the attempt was made quite recently to create suspicion regarding Britain's stand in case of war, between this country and Japan. Even if only on account of the attitude of the British dominions in and about the Pacific, no British Government would think of taking sides against us in such a conflict.

none would outlive the mere suggestion.

Finally, one fact stands out against the background of guesswork: Great Britain and we have managed to get along without serious trouble for more than one hundred years. Errors have been committed on both sides, but a sound and well-intentioned policy has afforded a basis for the equitable adjustment of all difficulties, though at times tense as trying situations have developed.

Great Britain has been, and probably will be, a rich country. She will survive and prosper even should we fail to relieve her of some of the burden she is now carrying, but that would neither acquit our obligation nor equalize the sacrifices made in a common cause.

The world has changed greatly since George Washington warned us against entangling alliances. He would be the last to urge that fundamental changes should be disregarded and the same course steered, no matter how different the rocks and currents. His admonition has served a long time as a beacon light and need not be lost sight of, even though we live best to other helpful signs and observations.

In those days it took months to receive a reply to any communication sent to Europe; today it can be had within a few minutes. The telegraph, the telephone, the wireless have annihilated distance. The oceans, formerly a barrier, now unite continents, and a virtual ferry service has replaced the old-time sailing boats. Business is carried on throughout the world on a scale never dreamed of before; gigantic financial transactions like the far distant countries. The result of study and of beneficent discoveries is immediately available everywhere. This rapidity of intercourse and modern scientific development do much to promote the happiness of man, but after also increased facilities for his undoing. Tremendously increased armament; greater mobility and quicker aggression; great intellects, devoted to the study how best to work unlimited destruction, are instances of this. It would seem that for good or ill, for upbuilding or ruin, the world is drawn more closely together than ever; clearly, there is no road back to splendid isolation!

Instead of avoiding alliances, it may now be wiser to promote them for the very purpose of preventing entanglements; and it may be the only safe way. Whether they are called a League of Nations, or an Association of Nations, or merely an Understanding, is immaterial, so long as the participants do not entertain extravagant expectations and do not forget that results will not be forthcoming, unless the spirit and the will to succeed are constantly maintained. At all events, standing alone no longer spells success. Our everyday life and our fate are so closely interwoven with other peoples' that we must find common ground upon which to build the future. To shrink from this duty and this manifest destiny is to betray a lack of foresight and of courage, and our people will not be found wanting if they but perceive the drift of the times.

Our road is clear. "Loyalty and Solidarity" should be the watchword in facing with our late associates the unsettled issues of the war; "Welcome Back," in extending a hand to hand to our recent enemies, so soon as they shall show a decent respect to the opinions of mankind; and always, "America First"—but "America First" not merely in enjoying the blessings of our escape from real war distress, and in exploiting our unlimited possibilities, but "America First" in every effort to correct injustice and help others less favored; above all "America First" in the readiness to make sacrifices in striving for the highest ideals.

Danish King Reported Coming To Visit Japan

Message States His Majesty Wishes To Make Tour Of World

King Christian and Queen Alexandra of Denmark will visit Japan, according to the Maifu, which quotes a message received by a firm in Kobe. The report states that their Majesties wish to visit Great Britain, the United States, France, Italy and Japan as a mark of appreciation of the decision of the Supreme Council which gave former Danish territory back to Denmark from Germany.

It is expected they will travel on the Danish ship Lofna.

May Raise Treasures Lost On Goodwin Sands

London, Feb. 7.—Before long it is probable that Goodwin Sands will be dotted over with treasure seekers. Hidden in the sands and within a few square miles is an accumulation of centuries of shipping disasters. The treasure thus concealed is worth many millions of pounds sterling.

Lord Headly, one of Britain's greatest engineering authorities, in his Presidential address to the Society of Engineers today said that the Goodwin Sands problem is not a wild cat scheme. Various schemes to recover the treasure, he said, have been turned down, but he thought it possible to sink a big floating concrete tower in Trinity Bay and to run tunnels from this base of operations in any direction. Boring with suitable augers would probably reveal, he added, the presence of many old craft, and the next question would be to arrange for rapid tunneling.

SON KILLED FATHER IN 1919

When a skeleton was found hidden in bushes in Ohagawa-mura, Kumegun, Okayama-ken recently police started an investigation which resulted in the subsequent confession of Mr. Tokiji Hakuga to the murder of his father. He strangled his father and then tried to burn him but did not succeed, then hiding the body in the bushes. That occurred in November, 1919.

Religious Strife In Southwestern India

Calcutta, March 18.—Reports received here from Southwestern India say that a state of war exists between the Syrian Christians and the Moslem Hindus in the native state of Cochin.

At the other end of India, in the Punjab, the greatest excitement prevails, following the butchery of 200 Sikh pilgrims by Hindu priests. The Moslem Hindu population is fleeing in a state of panic and dangerous rumors are afloat in regard to desecrated shrines and graves.

Gandhi, Nationalist leader and author of the movement to refuse all co-operation with the British Government, is still allowed to roam freely from end to end of the country.

In the Imperial Assembly, the Home Secretary said: "India will be lucky if she escapes at least sporadic disturbances during the next few months."

Cochin, with a population of 918,000 is a small feudatory native state ruled by the Kahatriya dynasty (Hindu) in subordination to Madras. About one-fifth of the population are Syrian Christians and Roman Catholics. Under its present ruler, Sir Sri Rama Varma, G.C.S.I., the little state has enjoyed great prosperity.

Vladivostok Unsafe For All Russians, Says One Witness

Husband Of Woman Now In Yokohama Kidnapped By Bandits For Ransom And Strangled—Confessed Murderers May Go Free

Tokio, March 13.—Details of a ransom and murder case at Vladivostok, which has created more than the usual interest in such a matter, because of the prominence of the persons concerned and the number of bandits arrested, have been given to a representative of The Japan Advertiser by a young business man who has recently arrived from Vladivostok. The man taken for ransom was Mr. Isahim D. Bernson, formerly one of the biggest sugar dealers of Moscow, who has lived in Yokohama a year and a half. Mrs. Bernson is now a resident of Yokohama.

On December 11 last year Mr. Bernson, who was 65 years old, went from his residence on the main street of Vladivostok across the street to the Versailles Hotel about 6 o'clock in the evening. He had been ill during the preceding two weeks and had not left the house. He had recovered somewhat and went across to the hotel, the biggest in the city, for a business appointment. Upon his return after about an hour he was opening the street door of his residence when three armed bandits seized and gagged him and took him away in a motor car.

RANSOM DEMANDED

Mrs. Bernson, who was then in Vladivostok with her husband, did not know what had happened to him, but did not notify the police. On December 13, two days after the disappearance of Mr. Bernson, she received a letter demanding ¥400,000. The letter said that if the police were notified or payment was not made by the next day the abducted man would be killed, following which they would also kill her. The bandits gave her instructions how to meet them by a round-about route through the city. The letter was accompanied by a note from Mr. Bernson urging his wife to get the money from the bank and meet the bandits' terms. She determined to do so and while she was out the next day another letter came, sent by a cab driver, who was given instructions to deliver it to the porter in the Bernson residence. The porter was not in and the proprietor of the cab service, who suspected something from the fact that this second communication was sent in a sealed tin can, took the driver and the message to the police.

Thus the police were working to catch the bandits and recover the abducted man without the knowledge of the woman, who was making arrangements to meet the demands of the outlaws. She had several communications with them, in one of which they reduced the amount to ¥100,000. For five days after the 15th she could not get in touch with them and she advertised in every Vladivostok newspaper for the persons who had sent her the notes to write to her and send her a note in her husband's handwriting. On December 20 she received a note which said they had taken pity on her and would ask for only ¥40,000. The bandits wrote that her husband was not there then and so could not write to her.

The police a day or two before that had rounded up about 25 suspected men and examined them. Several of the arrested men confessed to participation in the affair and gave the police instructions as to where to find the body of Mr. Bernson, whom they confessed to having strangled to death on the 14th. The body was found on the Tchorin Peninsula across the bay from Vladivostok. It had been thrown in a ditch and covered with loose earth. Two towels were drawn tight and tied around the neck. The bandits said the man had been unwell, partly because of his fright and the hardships undergone after abduction, and that they had intended taking his body to the bay and throwing it in. On the way they became tired, however, and strangled the man and threw the body in a ditch.

Other arrests were made and several bandits were shot as they tried to escape. The others are still under arrest at Vladivostok and the case is in the hands of the procurator. The band is very strong and it is doubted if the confessed murderers will be punished. The doctor who performed the post mortem examination said the man had died at his own hands. Mrs. Bernson was brought back to Japan by her grown son and they expect to leave for Europe before long to remain there until conditions settle in Russia.

The person who related the story said that abductions had been very frequent before July of last year and had then died down until the prominent case in December. He said, however, that the life of no Russian was safe there, especially so if he possessed any wealth or if he in any way offended a member of the Bolshevik Government. Commenting on the report that 30 or so Russians had come to Japan en route to Siberia on a recent steamer, he said that they had been reading Bolshevik propaganda and imagined that Siberia was an ideal land. They have American dollars in their pockets, he said, and feel confident, but they will soon find that even gold will not buy food and other necessities where there are virtually none. In Siberia, which used to supply a large portion of the world with butter, he said, that article can not now be found.

GERMANS SEEK OLD TRADE

Trying to Regain Markets in South America and Mexico
Washington, Feb. 3.—An effort is being made by Germany to re-establish her markets in South America and Mexico, according to cables reports to the Commerce Department today from American Trade Commissioners in Buenos Aires, Santiago, Mexico City and Lima.

In Argentina German hardware competition will not be very strong for a long time, it is stated, though prices asked are much lower than those for American goods—15 to 30 percent in some cases. Deliveries, however, are slow and uncertain. Prices asked for German machine tools also are much lower than those for similar American articles. Terms are cash before delivery, or cash against documents in Argentina.

Freight from Germany arriving in Chile is increasing, but as yet German goods are not being offered at retail there in large quantities. The German salesmen in Chile offering silverplated, nickel, pottery and enamel ware are increasing. They are offering also cheap hardware and electrical supplies. The prices quoted are much lower than those for American goods, although comparisons are difficult, owing to differences in quality. Machinery also is being offered at low prices by the Germans. The terms of credit are liberal and deliveries steady.

Notions and specialties, including metal wares of various kinds, and for the most part, of inferior quality, are the lines in which the Germans are most active in Mexico. Considerable shipments of electrical goods have been received. Apparently a semi-monthly service is being maintained by the Hamburg-American Line to accommodate the Mexican trade.

Humor And Hymns

There are many stories of wedding hymns. During the completion of a certain well-known hymnal one member of the Committee, whose wife's name was Grace, asserted that at his wedding they sang

Grace, 'tis a charming sound, and provoked the report that it would have been more appropriate still if they had sung of

The scanty triumphs Grace hath won.

Sir William Harecourt once quoted a stately hymn with pungency that would have delighted Addison. A party of M.P.s around the smoke-room fire of the House of Commons were restive under the historical monologue of Sir Ralmond Knightley of Fawley who was prone to recall his long descent.

Knightley to the listening earth recalls the story of his birth said the witty Liberal. Harecourt made a genius for what might be called punning quotations. On hearing Tennyson, at the close of a rhapsody on tobacco, exclaim: "The after-breakfast pipe is the most enjoyable of the day," Sir William murmured: "The earliest pipe of half-awakened bard."

Though the poet, like the rest of the company, had to chuckle, it is said that he rather resented the substitution of "bards" for "birds."

While Parliamentary wit is scintillating we may have "Toby M.P.'s" champion non sequitur. Bohemian friends on a driving tour put up at Stony Stratford. They passed a sleepless but not a lonely night. In the morning one of them remarked "They may well call this Stony Stratford. I was never so well bitten in my life." That may be bracketed with the feat of the Scottish magistrate who in sentencing a husky ruffian said "God gave you health and strength

CHINESE WAR HERO BURIED WITH HIGH HONORS IN FRISCO

American Legion And Six Companies Conduct Services For Hong Chow Lee

San Francisco, Jan. 24.—A hero of Chinatown was buried yesterday afternoon, and to give him the last honors, Americans and Chinese gathered in the little Chinese Congregational church overlooking Portsmouth Square.

He was Hong Chow Lee, twenty-two years old when he died in the Argonne. First of the many San Francisco Chinese who entered the service of the United States during the war, Hong laid down his life in the bitter fighting of the last days of battle. Last week his body was sent home.

Flies and flowers filled the little chapel for the services at which the American Legion and the Chinese Six Companies were in charge. Men of the American Legion were pall bearers, and seven Chinese wearing the olive-drab uniforms in which they had served the colors were honorary pallbearers. With Hong's parents sat his two sisters and his two small brothers in Boy Scout uniforms.

Charles Kendrick, American Legion National Committeeman from California, gave the eulogy. "Soldier and citizen, farewell," he said "Comrade, I salute you."

When the funeral procession started on its way through the narrow streets of Chinatown, a flag-draped photograph of Hong in his army uniform, was carried before the hearse, in accordance with Chinese custom, and behind walked the members of the family and the mourners. At the Chinese cemetery, a guard from the Presidio fired the volley across the grave, and "taps" sounded farewell to Hong.

Sometimes the Bishop wrote a letter in the same way. It added a pleasant zest to business letters, he says, and few of his correspondents noticed it though they may have noticed the clearness of his message. Short sentences and plain meanings are even more admirable than short words. I should like to take the blithering idiot from one side of the Atlantic who writes about "our Transatlantic cousins" when he means Americans and tie him up to the American writer who begins his story with a sentence eighteen lines long and drops them both in a river. They could choose either many-syllabled Gaudalquivir or plain Cam or Exe or Tyne.

BEAVER BOARD

FOR BETTER WALLS & CEILINGS

Solid Comfort, Hot or Cold

Within Beaver Board walls and ceilings there's solid comfort. The closely-meshed pure spruce fibre of this good lumber product resists heat, cold and sound better than lath and plaster or other wall building materials.

You don't have to depend on outside labor for building Beaver Board walls and ceilings. Beaver Board is quickly called to the studding of new buildings or partitions or directly over old cracked plaster and dingy wall paper. Beaver Board has endless uses about the farm. It's just the thing to line your work shop and it's even better for the building of a beautiful new room in some waste space in the house.

In a new booklet, "Building More Comfort into the Farm Home," you'll find many suggestions. It's free, together with an actual piece of Beaver Board, if you ask us.

YOU can't expect Beaver Board results unless this trade-mark is on the back of the board you buy.

CASTORIA

Fletcher's Castoria is particularly a preparation for Infants and Children made agreeable to the taste, acceptable to the stomach and pleasant in its action. It has been in use for over thirty years and has always been one of the most highly esteemed of all cathartic preparations. It has one great advantage over other preparations of its kind in that while it opens the organs readily and completely, it does not have a tendency to produce subsequent constipation so much to be dreaded.

It was only after years of research in the fields of herbs and roots for a combination of purely vegetable matter that would have all the virtues of Castor Oil, without its disagreeable, nauseating properties, especially when used for infants or children, that the formula used in Fletcher's Castoria was found, and which for over 30 years has proven its worth. Try it.

Save the Babies.

Infantry mortality is something frightful. We can hardly realize that of all the children born in civilized countries, twenty-two per cent., or nearly one quarter die before they reach one year, thirty-seven per cent., or more than one-third, before they are five, and one-half before they are fifteen! We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save many of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tinctures and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity, they stupefy, retard circulation and lead to congestion, sickness, death. To avoid any possibility of giving your child opiates, or narcotics of any kind, keep Fletcher's Castoria in the house, and Save the Babies.

WHAT THE UNDERWRITERS' LABEL ON A SAFE INDICATES

Known Resistance Against Heat—

Safes, bearing the labels of the Underwriters' Laboratories, Inc., offer known resistance against heat because their protection value has been definitely established by standard, scientific tests of searching thoroughness.

Any manufacturer of safes or filing cabinets can receive recognition from the Underwriters' Laboratories, provided he submits his product to be tested. It will be awarded classification and a label according to its ability to resist heat, impact and certain structural requirements.

THE SAFE-CABINET was the first safe to be granted a label by the Underwriters' Laboratories, and now bears their highest labels—Class "A" and Class "B," signifying ability to resist terrific and continuous heat for 4 hours and 2 hours respectively.

Class A
UNDERWRITERS' LABORATORIES
INSPECTED SAFE CLASS A No. 1

Safes bearing Class A labels are effective in withstanding severe fire (reaching 1,700 degrees F.) for at least one hour before interior temperature reaches 350 degrees F., and in withstanding while in highly heated condition, impact due to falling 30 feet in the clear.

Class B
INSPECTED SAFE CLASS B No. 1

Safes bearing Class B labels are effective in withstanding severe fire (reaching 1,700 degrees F.) for at least one hour before interior temperature reaches 350 degrees F., and in withstanding while in highly heated condition, impact due to falling 30 feet in the clear.

Class C
INSPECTED SAFE CLASS C No. 1

Safes bearing Class C labels are effective in withstanding severe fire (reaching 1,700 degrees F.) for at least one hour before interior temperature reaches 350 degrees F., and in withstanding while in highly heated condition, impact due to falling 30 feet in the clear.

Light-Weight Safes
UNDERWRITERS' LABORATORIES, INC.
INSPECTED LIGHT WEIGHT SAFE

Safes bearing Light-Weight Safe labels are effective in withstanding severe fire (reaching 1,700 degrees F.) for at least one hour before interior temperature reaches 350 degrees F., and in withstanding while in highly heated condition, impact due to falling 30 feet in the clear.

Insulated Cabinets
UNDERWRITERS' LABORATORIES, INC.
INSPECTED INSULATED CABINET

Insulated cabinets bearing Insulated Cabinet labels are effective in withstanding fire of moderate severity (reaching 1,650 degrees F.) for at least 45 minutes before interior temperature reaches 350 degrees F., and in withstanding only lighter impacts.

British New Poets Are Not Concerned About 'Messages'

'We Disbelieve In The Magic Of The Word Sin With A Capital S,' Says Robert Nichols, In Tokio To Teach English Literature

(Japan Advertiser)

"We believe in sunlight, cold water and a sense of humor."

Mr. Robert Nichols, who arrived yesterday morning from England on the Kitano Maru to take the chair of English Literature at the Tokyo Imperial University, the chair once occupied by Lafcadio Hearn, was speaking of the Georgian Poets, the younger school in England of which he is one of the most prominent members.

Sunlight, cold water and a sense of humor! Mr. Nichols walked back and forth before the open fire in one of the little sitting rooms of the Imperial Hotel. It was raining—outside. Twenty-seven years old, laughing, eager and enthusiastic, Mr. Nichols looked as if his belief were born of practice.

"I found when at school," he said, "that the only time I really learned was when I was under a master with personality, when he gave a personal point of view to what he taught. This is what I want to do in Tokio, not because my own view is better, but because a personal view is more readily apprehended. I have no illusions that a personal view can be unbiased, and I shall merely try to drive home what I take to be the cardinal points in any author, for it is almost if not quite impossible for any literary critic to appreciate rightly both the Brontës and Jane Austen. For instance I regard one as born a Brontë and an Austenite. I was born a Brontë, and therefore I shall not be able to give quite such an incisive account of Miss Austen as of the author of 'Wuthering Heights.'"

GAINED RECOGNITION

Mr. Nichols has already won his place as a present-day poet; those who have met him attest his right to claim a live virile personality. He is conscious of the honor done him in the call for three years' service in Japan. He makes no pretenses of being a philologist or a historian of literature. He is "merely a working artist and critic." The "working artist" has written one book of poems "Arduous and Endurances," which has run through its fifth edition. The first part of it is given over to war poetry, the second part, "A Faun's Holiday," is a hymn to country life. His second book of poems, "Aurelia," came out only last year and is divided into blank verse, the poetry of group psychology and love sonnets. "The Smile of the Sphinx," prose, has been published in a limited edition by the Beaumont Press but will appear in a book of short stories to be issued later. A religious drama, in which he sought to display the direct antithesis of spiritual and material life, had not been produced at the time Mr. Nichols left England. He has done literary criticism for the New Statesman and the Observer, and for five months lectured in America on English literature.

AIM IS TO DISCOVER TRUTH

"The aim and end of literature, which is a branch of art," he said, as he laughingly sounded a warning that he was about to become "heavy," "is the same as that of science, namely, the discovery of truth, yet it serves another purpose not originally its own. In the process of discovering truth it deepens the consciousness of man, and this takes place in two directions: A penetration in depth and width.

"There is one task which befits a professor of a branch of the humanities, and that is to endeavor to bring home by the explanation of this penetration in width how much the different races have in common, for no great culture exists for one race alone. Politics and international economics are not my province. I understand nothing of them, but I do, I think, understand very well that until men become Man-conscious we are unlikely to be able to escape the consequences of faction, consequences which ultimately take the form of killing-machines."

PUBLISH AN ANTHOLOGY

The Georgian Poets, of whom Mr. Nichols is one, originated at a meeting in London of a number of young English poets before the war, held under the auspices of Mr. Edward Marsh, secretary to Mr. Winston Churchill. The conclusion reached by the meeting was that the average poetry buyer could not buy every poetry book that was issued, and therefore the group should publish once every two years an anthology of the best of the poems of that period, to be called "Georgian Poetry." Mr. Marsh put together the first volume and issued it at his own expense in 1913. Much to his surprise, says Mr. Nichols, the book had an enormous success and reached 11,000 copies in the British Isles alone.

"The time has passed," he said, "when a young fellow would be ragged if he were caught with a book of poetry. Most of the chaps who went to the war were full of poetry. The sonnets and the death of Rupert Brooke, with whom I had a slight acquaintance, marked the turning point, and today England possesses a not inconsiderable company of young singers."

RENAISSANCE IN BRITAIN

In England now there are some 10 men between the ages of 20 and 35, "who," he says, "are doing work at least some of the time that will live. It is a sort of minor renaissance, very minor, to be sure, but still a renaissance." Mr. Nichols himself came out at the same time as Siegfried Sassoon and Robert Graves, Aldous Huxley and Mr. Blunden came out later. "English poetry today," says Mr. Nichols, "although it may not boast of the past, does at least possess a small company of select poets on the whole comparable to those of the early Elizabethan or middle Jacobean Ages. A characteristic of their poetry is that it has not what used to be called a 'message,' or if it has one is not conscious of it. It is mainly concerned with action and believes in a greater rhythmic freedom. We believe in sunlight, cold water and a sense of humor, and disbelieve in the magic of the word Sin spelled with a capital S, which played so great a part in the work of the poets of the nineties. I should say that the whole of a glad acceptance of truth however terrible it be is the note of today."

A REVIVAL OF THE THEATRE

There has been a great revival of interest in the theatre in England, which nearly perished during the war, says Mr. Nichols. An indication of this is that Oxford University Dramatic Society abandoned its policy of presenting always Shakespeare, "and," he says, "we shed some portions of the greatest work of the greatest living English writer, 'The Dynasts,' by Thomas Hardy. It was performed in a worthy manner, and I should never forget the enthusiasm and feeling solidarity of the young men that evening when Hardy rose from his stall and signified his pleasure with little bird-like bows. Although Mr. Nichols, who arrived only yesterday morning, has not yet been able to outline definitely his work at the University, he expects to give a personal review of English literature from Chaucer down, showing that the same characteristics have ruled throughout that the character of the English mind is not so much precision and clarity as a faculty for suggesting the connection between pure ideas and life.

HONOR ARMY AT FIRST POST-WAR BALL IN FRANCE

Festivity Rivals Brilliance Of Spectacles Given In Days Of Napoleon III.

Paris, Feb. 16.—Rivalling in brilliancy and richness of color the festivities of the splendid days under Napoleon III., a spectacle consecrated to the glory of the armies of France marked the occasion of the first ball days of 1914.

Led by President Millerand, of the Republic, the Premier and the three greatest soldiers of France—Marshals Joffre, Foch and Pétain—a great throng of notables of the political, industrial, social, literary and scientific world paid tribute to the splendid French genius which had seen the nation through the long World War.

Not only did the ball bring together a majority of the prominent figures of the day, but it inaugurated what is expected to be the most brilliant social season since 1914. Though very few notable members of American society are here at present, the ball was attended by a great number of the American set at present dominating life in Paris and on the Riviera.

AMERICANS PRESENT

The Drexels were up from Nice with Anthony wearing for the first time the new velvet fringed evening dress introduced by André de Fouquieres last January. Frank J.

Gould, who has just acquired a controlling interest in the Mogador Theater, which proposes to rival the Folies Bergères for "undressy revues," was very much present and was accompanied by several members of the "Gould colony" at Maisons Laftite, including Mlle. Elsie Barbour, who it is understood abandoned the stage for an operatic career at the instance of Gould.

PRINCESS MURAT THERE

Princess Michael Murat, with a fine coat of Riviera tan and a happy smile occasioned perhaps by lucky runs in the mirror room at Monte Carlo, was in the grand march, which she took on the arm of her husband, Prince Michael, who has once again come into his own as legitimate leader of the Paris middle-aged set. Vicomte and Vicomtesse de Chezelles (the latter thinking perhaps of Washington balls when she was Gertrude Van Dussen Reed) were present, as was the Marchioness of Breteuil, nee Garner.

Marquis and Marchioness of Chambrun were among the earliest to arrive, as usual, and the former Margaret River Nichols looked very well after her. Winter spent at Biarritz and the Côte d'Azur. The former Ethel Barbey, coming also with her husband, Count de Jumilhac, and Mme. Georges Kinen who was Anita Elustia, of New York, stayed throughout the evening.

ANNA GOULD GRACES EVENT

Duke and Duchess of Montmorency remained at Cannes, but Princess de Sievers Montebello, nee Hay, was present, as was Edith Devereux Clapp, the present Countess de Rougemont. And to wind up the list the occasion was, of course, graced by the presence of Anna Gould, Duchess de Tallyrand, and Princess Viora, nee Helen Kelly, who has just thrown open her town house at No. 40 rue du Ranelagh for the season.

STORK LANDS HIM IN COURT

He Wins When It's a Boy, Loses When They're Twins

New York, Feb. 8.—William Downey, 28 years old, of 128 West 130th Street, after pleading guilty to a charge of intoxication in Night Court last night, received a suspended sentence, after he explained the cause.

Downey was arrested at 116th Street and Eighth Avenue, in front of the home of his brother-in-law, when he refused to obey an order to move in.

Here is his explanation:

When Downey's sister was about to become a mother, Downey and her husband made a bet. Downey bet the child would be a boy and his brother-in-law bet it would be a girl. Last night the stork made its call. Downey was informed the baby was a boy and collected the bet. He took a few drinks to celebrate and when he returned his brother-in-law demanded his money back, explaining that twins had been born, the second child being a girl. Downey refused to give up the money and went around to have another drink. When he returned he became boisterous and was arrested.

KINGMAN & BROS.

How to Preserve the Teeth

In order to keep the teeth in a good condition scientific precaution must be taken. Through negligence, decay and numerous other affections such as tooth-ache, dental perionitis osteoperiostitis, necrosis of the jaw, etc., may arise. During the process of ingestion, there are settled on the teeth, some deposits of mineral and organic matters, called tartar, which poses a fearful power of pressing the gum. As an inevitable result of the presence of this tartar, the teeth will become elongated and movable and will, by degrees, absorb away the enamel, leading ultimately to the decay and degeneration of the teeth. The tartar is so hard and resistant to the process of brushing that it cannot be scraped off except with dental instruments specially devised for that purpose.

Dr. KINGMAN offers to the public his service for preserving their teeth at an annual subscription fee of $10.00 per head to be paid in advance.

The work to be done by Dr. KINGMAN to the subscribers consists in:—

(1) Cleaning of the teeth quarterly

(2) Filing with gold platinum alloy only, when the teeth present holes.

(3) Inspecting the teeth at any time at the desire of the subscribers.

PROFITS EXPECTED TO SHOW DECREASE

Predicted N.Y.K. Dividend Will Drop From 30 Percent To 20 T.K.K. Also To Suffer

Even the profits of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha for the current business term, which terminates at the end of March, are expected to show a considerable decrease owing to the shipping depression, says Japan Advertiser.

It is estimated that the probable rate of dividend will be about 20 percent, as against 30 percent for the previous term and 50 percent during the war boom. While freight receipts have generally decreased, there has been no appreciable reduction in working expenses, and it is said that the number of ships whose operations are not remunerative has increased, particularly during the last two or three.

In the previous business term the company's profits amounted to Y. 12,320,000, as against Y. 19,410,000 for the term further preceding, net profits amounting to Y. 9,380,000, as compared with Y. 16,990,000 for the latter term.

What decrease the profits for the current term will show can not be definitely ascertained until the company's books are closed at the end of this month, but it is estimated that the decrease will amount to about Y. 3,000,000. If this estimate is correct, the net profit will not be more than Y. 6,380,000, to which Y. 2,280,000 carried forward in the last term may be added, making a total of Y. 8,660,000.

This total is less than the net profit for the last term, and it will be difficult for the company to maintain the same rate of dividend for the current term as for the last, or 30 percent. The company has large reserve funds to draw upon, but in view of the expected eventfulness of the world's shipping situation in the future, it is not deemed wise to drain the reserves.

Last term's dividend consisted of 10 percent ordinary dividend and 20 percent extra dividend. It is estimated that for the current term the extra rate will probably be reduced to 10 percent, and that together with the ordinary 10 percent, a total of 20 percent will be paid.

A reduction in the profits of the Toyo Kisen Kaisha is also expected. In the last term the company's net profit amounted only to a little over Y. 800,000, and a further decrease is expected for the current term.

Some estimate that the net profit will be Y. 300,000 or Y. 400,000, and in this case the company can pay an honorable rate of dividend, drawing upon its funds for the equalization of dividends.

As a matter of fact, in the last term the company took Y. 450,000 from these funds, and adding it to the net profit, paid an ordinary dividend of 12 percent and an extra dividend of 3 percent, a total of 15 percent. Even when the ordinary rate alone is to be maintained for the current term, it is estimated that a sum of Y. 800,000 or Y. 900,000 will have to be withdrawn from the funds for the equalization of dividends.

JAPANESE TRADE WITH BANGKOK IS INCREASING

Nation Now Second To Great Britain And May Soon Gain Lead At Siamese Port

Trade at Bangkok, Siam, is displaying an interesting change. Japan's business there is more expansive than ever, the entry and clearance of Japanese freighters at the port being more brisk. It is believed that Japan's business will be ahead of Great Britain's trade as far as the tonnage of Japanese boats entering the port indicates.

The foreign trade of January at Bangkok was, according to a semi-official report from the port, up to 11,371,730 tons for imports, and 10,319,812 tons for exports. Of the total imports for the month, bullion and coins were valued at 144,193 tons. The principal exports were rice and teak wood. Compared with the previous month, imports decreased by 2,370,366 tons, while exports increased by 3,043,006 tons.

During January the permit for the export of 400,000 tons of rice was issued and at Bangkok trade was a little more active. A Japanese steamship company tried to cope with this situation by assigning more tonnage to the port. The removal of the ban on rice dated January 29 gave a great stimulus to trade at Bangkok and more Japanese lines sent their freighters to the port.

The report says that as far as the tonnage and number of freighters entering and clearing from the port indicate, Japanese trade is now second to that of Great Britain. The tonnage and number of Siamese boats are almost equal to those of Japanese. It is believed that soon Japan's shipping trade at Bangkok will be larger than Great Britain's.

Coal Market

Messrs. Wheelock and Company write as follows in their coal market report of March 24:

JAPAN COAL
Although this market is still very quiet a small amount of business in dust coals has been done during the past fortnight which has been made possible by the recent hardening of exchange and if exchange were to continue firm for a little time there is the possibility of more business coming about.

FUSHUN COAL
For the same reason as above a certain amount of business has been put through in this staple.

FUCHUNG ANTHRACITE COAL
There is no change to report in this staple and deliveries from the mines are going on as usual.

KAIPING COAL
Arrivals have been more frequent than for some time past and the situation in regard to shortage of trucks in the North is therefore assumed to be somewhat better. Deliveries are maintained at about an average for this season, whilst Cotton Mills both Foreign and Chinese are working at full pressure, the Silk Industries have not yet recovered from the recent depression. There is still a ready market for good grade coals.

Rubber Prices

Messrs. R. N. Truman and Company have received the following telegram from their Singapore Agents in connection with the weekly auctions held at Singapore on Wednesday, March 23:

No. 1 Smoked Sheet $0.21 per pound equivalent to 8s. 8½d. ex warehouse Singapore.
No. 1 Crepe $0.38 per pound equivalent to $3. 10½d. ex warehouse Singapore.
Market quiet. Offered 619 tons; sold 403 tons.

Freight Market

Messrs. Wheelock and Company write as follows in their fortnightly freight market report dated, March 24:

The situation in our Outward Freight markets is as follows:
TO UNITED KINGDOM AND CONTINENT
Conditions remain unchanged and some of the Lines are reducing their sailings from the port. An item of interest to shippers is the reduction of the rates on Groundnuts and Almonds (with shells) to 200/- and without shells to 20/- per ton of 20 cwt. subject to the usual deferred rebate of 10%, which came into effect on the 21st inst.

TO U.S. VIA PACIFIC
There is still a fair amount of silk going forward via the Pacific and hides and skins have begun to move via Panama and Suez. Canal rates are weak and the Trans-Pacific Lines have reduced the rates on certain commodities.

COASTWISE
The Northern Ports are now open again and there is a fair amount of enquiry from Newchwang Southwards and we expect to see trade generally become more brisk in the near future.

New Engineering Co. Meeting

The New Engineering and Shipbuilding Works, Ltd., held its extraordinary general meeting in the Shanghai General Chamber of Commerce, 1 Yuen-ming-yuen Road, yesterday to confirm four resolutions for the increase of its capital, which were passed at an extraordinary meeting on March 5.

Mr. A. W. Burkill presided in the absence of Mr. H. E. Arnold and was supported by Mr. A. W. Brankston and Mr. G. S. Mackie, directors. The total number of shares represented at the meeting was 63,095.

The resolutions passed were:
1. "That the capital of the company be increased to Tls. 5,000,000."

(a) by the creation of 500,000 preference shares of Tls. 5 each.
(b) by the creation of 350,000 further ordinary shares of Tls. 5 each."

Proposed by Mr. H. E. Arnold and seconded by Mr. A. W. Burkill.

2. "There shall be allotted to shareholders out of the reserve fund of the company as it stands on the twenty-third day of March, 1921, Tls. 10 in the form of two fully paid preference shares (of Tls. 5 each), for every share held by them and such preference shares shall entitle the holders thereof to a fixed cumulative preferential dividend of 3 percent on the capital for the time being paid up on such shares and shall rank in a winding-up both as regards capital and dividend in priority to other shares (but shall not confer any further right to participate in profits or surplus assets nor shall they confer any right of voting at any general meeting of the company nor qualify any person to be a director of the company."

Proposed by Mr. H. E. Arnold and seconded by Mr. A. W. Burkill.

3. "60,000 of the said 350,000 ordinary shares shall be issued and offered in the first instance at a premium of Tls. 5 per share to the members of the company in the proportion as nearly as may be of two of such new ordinary shares for every five ordinary shares held by them."

Proposed by Mr. H. E. Arnold and seconded by Mr. A. W. Brankston.

4. "That the articles of association of the company be altered in manner following, that is to say, that the following article shall be inserted after article 125 namely:
125A. Any general meeting declaring a dividend may direct payment of such dividend wholly or in part by the distribution of specific assets and in particular of paid-up shares, debentures or debenture stock of the company or of any other company or in any one or more such ways. Where requisite a proper contract shall be filed in accordance with § 80 of the Companies Ordinance 1911 and the directors may appoint any person to sign such contract on behalf of the persons entitled to the dividend and such appointment shall be effective."

Proposed by Mr. H. E. Arnold and seconded by Mr. A. W. Brankston.

Find College Woman Below Venus de Milo Standard

Philadelphia, Feb. 7.—The modern woman college student is far below the physical standard of the Venus de Milo, says Dr. R. Tait McKenzie of the University of Pennsylvania. The modern American youth, on the contrary, he says, has retained more of the classic Greek beauty of the human form.

"If we compare the typical student of our women's colleges with the deep-chested, vital type that has come to us through the royal succession of Venuses like the Venus de Milo, we are apt to become pessimistic over the future of the race," adds Mr. McKenzie. "This may be some explanation of the fact that the native American race depends for its continuance so largely on immigration."

ARCHBISHOP'S HOME BOMBED

Another Explosion Partially Wrecks American Plant Having Labor Trouble

REDS UNDER SUSPICION
Head Of Church Led Fight On Bolshevik Movement—American Leaders

Mexico City, Feb. 6.—Mexican Reds started their threatened reign of terror by attacks with dynamite bombs on the palace of Archbishop Mora del Rio, head of the Mexican Church, and an American jewelry manufacturing company, early this morning.

A bomb placed in the door of the Bishop's palace wrecked the entire front of the building and shattered window glasses of houses for the entire block.

One hour later a bomb was dropped in an open space leading to the workshop and private dwellings of Juergens and Co., American manufacturers of jewelry. The last explosion caused damage estimated at $10,000. The entire stairway leading to the upper part of the building was wrecked.

The attempt on the life of the Archbishop is supposed to be due to the stand the Church has taken against Bolshevism. The Archbishop has preached against the spread of radical ideas, warning Catholics that the Church would take decided action against all who joined the radical movement.

Juergens and Co. has had trouble with workmen since December. The workmen demanded a 100 percent increase, which the company refused, using strikebreakers.

The radical movement here is headed by Colonel Villares, who led the Reds into the national palace during the De la Huerta regime, where they waved red and black flags and advised workmen to sack stores; Felipe Carrillo, a Socialist from Yucatan; Haberman, an American Red leader, assistant to Carrillo; Morones, lately removed from the Government factories; and Lynn Gale, an American publisher of a Red magazine.

Colonel Rasgado, Chief of Police, stated this afternoon that he was sure the bomb outrages were a Red job. He said that when he reported to President Obregon he would advocate immediate deportation for American and other foreign radical leaders. Colonel Rasgado stated that several arrests had been made and the entire force had dropped all other police business in order to pursue suspected Reds.

General Obregon is expected to show a strong hand in dealing with the case. His past speeches indicate he has no sympathy with any doctrine which conflict with the Mexican Constitution. During his trip to El Paso General Obregon addressed a meeting of working men in Torreon, stating that the Government had no sympathy with the Bolshevik movement and would enforce the present laws against radical movements, and promised new laws more forceful.

Epic, 'Paradox Lost' Is Chesterton's Hope

Audience Chuckles When He Says He Cannot Find One In His Books

New York, Feb. 8.—If Gilbert K. Chesterton were cast on a desert isle what books would he choose to read? Certainly not his own, he said last night at the Times Square Theatre, as he conducted a lecture on "Literature as Luggage," a subject he translated from English to "a kindred tongue" making it read, "Books as Baggage."

Mr. Chesterton made an astounding revelation which was received by the audience with great merriment. In reply to a question as to the psychological significance of the use of paradox in his books he declared gravely: "I never use paradox. The statements I make are the wearisome and obvious common sense. I have even been driven to the tedium of reading through my own books, and have been unable to find any paradox. In fact, the thing is quite tragic, and some day I shall hope to write an epic called 'Paradox Lost.'"

At the conclusion, when questions were permitted a man in the audience asked the lecturer if he would take with him to the desert isle copies of several Catholic publications which he argued were mediums of propaganda sowing distrust between America and England. The question was asked and Mr. Chesterton said his acquaintance with the papers was slight but he did not accept the questioner's descriptions of them. He said emphatically that he did not intend to follow out any subject suggested that would tend to create disunion between England and America.

"The best way to achieve union is for someone to do well what I have done feebly and that is to discuss the common heritage between the literature and the culture we both claim," he declared.

Tsingtao University Prep. Academy Notes

Professor W. A. Flewelling and Mrs. Flewelling, of Boston, recently arrived at the Tsingtao University Preparatory Academy. Professor Flewelling is head of the Department of Vocational Training and Mrs. Flewelling is assistant in the Department of Commerce. Professor Flewelling has had ten years' training in vocational work, and he came here directly from the Vocational School in Bridgeport, Connecticut, where he was in charge of the School. Professor Flewelling is a graduate of Boston Normal Art, and has taken extension work at both Columbia University and Yale College. Mrs. Flewelling has had eight years' experience in commercial training.

Captain R. F. Nall, Student Executive, recently arrived from Shanghai after a week's business trip to that port.

Many new students enrolled for the new semester. Among those who entered were the three eldest sons of Mr. L. Ladow, manager of the Carlton Cafe at Shanghai.

The Academy closed on Thursday, March 24, for the Easter holidays. It will re-open on April 2nd. During the Easter holidays the cadets will be given an extensive drill for the Far Eastern Olympic Games. A regular holiday schedule has been issued whereby the cadets are required to spend four hours daily in athletics.

Miss Friedman, of Harbin, has just arrived at the Academy. She is to assist Professor Zviagin in the Department of Music.

The cadets' evenings during the Easter holidays are in the charge of Professor Zviagin who will devote his time for the preparation of the cadets.

tion of his Music recital which is to be given in the very near future.

The members of the Faculty were invited to a Chinese Dinner at the home of Mrs. Samuel Zimmerman on Sunday. The other guests were Mr. N. F. Allman, American Consul, Mrs. Allman, Mr. Sears and Mr. Alperovich.

Dr. Arthur F. Torrance, President, left on Wednesday evening for an extended trip throughout Southern China, visiting the various universities and schools.

Rev. Morgan delivered a most interesting sermon to the cadets on Sunday morning. The topic was "Playing the Game." The regular hour for religious services has been changed to 10 o'clock on Sunday morning. An Easter program has been arranged for services for Easter Sunday.

Preparations are being made for the making of tennis courts at the Academy. This work is being rapidly pushed in order that the cadets may begin their practice in tennis.

Dr. Arthur F. Torrance, President, has been appointed representative for Tsingtao and other points in Shantung Province, of the China Contest Committee, for the Far Eastern Games. There is soon to be a meeting of all the athletes in this district, Lt. Noland, Physical Director, has commenced training these athletes and hopes to have a good number qualify for the games.

Miss Popoff and Miss Getiz, members of the Faculty, are now visiting friends in Shanghai during their Easter holidays.

Dr. Arthur F. Torrance, President, was a guest at dinner at the Governor's home on Saturday evening.

HOLIDAYS SEND FOOTBALL MEN FAR FROM TOWN

Soccer Fans Obligated To Be Content With Single Friendly Match

BARNES SCORES SIX
Is Star When S.S. Kyoto Is Beaten By Customs Eleven, 6-1

(By Whistle)

Football seemed pretty dead in Shanghai owing to the Spring or Easter holidays or something; note of the scheduled games took place on the Race Course. The double event due between the Football Club and the Race, was postponed till next Saturday. The Public School team failed to materialise, so the Engineers who had turned out to entertain them had to go home again—matchless as ever.

The few optimistic fans who turned out for their Saturday afternoon's football were lucky to have a friendly game provided, as a merchant ship "S.S. Kyoto" was in port, which runs an eleven of its own and she had arranged a game with the Customs, and this was the only game on the Race Course.

CUSTOMS P. C. vs. S.S. KYOTO
This game was played on the Football Club and resulted in a fairly easy win for the local team 6-1.

It was of a scrappy character and beyond the Kyoto goalies no one seemed to take it very seriously. At the start the Customs began to press and the goalkeeper was called on to save two in quick succession.

Several chances were lost by the Customs on the part of the Customs' forwards. Ogden forced a corner and put in a beauty. It was cleared but the center half picked up well out, and put in the best shot of the match, it struck the upright and rebounded out of the danger zone.

CUSTOMS SCORES 2
Then the forwards settled down and Barnes getting possession went through the defence, scoring easily, he followed this up with 2 more in about ten minutes. The second was a fine low drive and the third, he rushed when the goalie fumbled one. With three in hand the Customs began to slack off and the Kyoto forwards began to come into the picture. They got away several times, and at last their efforts were rewarded, the inside left going through and scoring. Soon after this Ogden thought he wanted a goal and waited up the wing and through the defence, shooting when well in, the goalie couldn't clear cleanly and held it long enough for Barnes to arrive and net it, but it was Ogden's goal.

Soon after Barnes made a fine solo run only to be beaten by the goalie, who saved at the expense of a corner. At this stage the Customs also lost several chances through offside.

The second half was more even, the Kyoto men combining much better and the Customs only added two goals.

Ogden ran through early on and looked like scoring, but shot too far across; the ball going out. Barnes followed by running away from the defence only to be robbed by the ubiquitous goalkeeper.

The Kyoto line then had a try forcing two corners both of which proved useless, they had hard luck, a head from a long shot just going outside. They pressed fairly hard for a while but it was not long before the Customs forwards began to move again.

Barnes let drive from a distance and the goalie caught it but let it drop between his feet, he cleared but the Ref. gave the goal.

Barnes' sixth and last came towards the end of the game from a ground shot just inside the left upright, which was too good for the Kyoto custodian.

The ship forwards stuck it out and kept the Customs defence busy, just before time their outside left got through and put in a very useful shot but Barnes was there and cleared safely.

It was a fairly easy win for the Customs as the score indicates, but it would be a good thing if other ships would follow the example of the "Kyoto".

SPORT AND STAGE BY DOMINO

OUR BEAUTY SPOT

Let the Germans refuse to pay reparation,
Let the Greek and the Turk still live on probation;
Let Ireland still squabble, let trouble and mark
Go down to the depths—But we've still Hongkew Park.

Its beauty the S. M. C. budget declares
Attracts all the nations—and sweethearts pair;
And in their near future the Council have plans
To please all the football and baseball fans.

The birds singing gaily may still think it strange
To hear the shot rattle from the Rids Range;
But that doesn't matter for birdies don't think—
And I hear that we're going to have a new rink.

But now let me change—and I'll take no refusal,
The rhyme must be changed to get in a poem—
For golfers, I think, of balls they would lose all
If it wasn't for boats like the funny old Fozzie.

THE A. D. C.

The A.D.C. is again in active rehearsal, and will produce on Friday April 8th, Mr. A. A. Milne's charming little comedy "Belinda." "Belinda" was first produced by Mr. Dion Boucicault at the New Theatre, London, in April of 1918, with Miss Irene Vanbrugh in the name-part. Miss Ethel Barrymore played it in New York. The author writes: "I hope it will read pleasantly, but I am quite incapable of judging it, her every speech of Belinda's comes to me now in Miss Vanbrugh's voice."

"Belinda" will be preceded by a one act play called "The Boy Comes Home." This also is a comedy by the same author. It was produced in September, 1918 by Mr. Owen Nasso at the Victoria Palace; and was afterwards introduced into "Hullo, America!" at the Palace Theatre, and the following April Mr. Godfrey Tearle played it at the Coliseum. The piece is still being featured in England.

Some old A.D.C. favorites will be seen in the cast, notably Mrs. Worcester, and Mrs. Rosaline Welch. Mr. Eric Prince has a fine character part; Mr. Muriel plays the part of a "Mr. Tremayne," and Mr. Lawrie Smith, who had been making big strides in amateur theatricals, has the biggest part of his career. Mrs. Dillon makes her debut in a sympathetic portrayal.

The curtain raiser is in the experienced hands of Mr. Morley Peel, Miss Berry and Mr. and Mrs. Rawson. The last named pair also make their first appearance with the local amateurs. They come from Manchester with an excellent reputation in amateur theatricals.

THE DENNISTON PLAYERS

The Denniston Players have been calling out some good and some poor houses during the last week. All the houses ought to be good. They are a fine band of actors and actresses. Miss Wanda Howard has created a furore with her wonderful study in the "Eyes of Youth" so much so that in spite of the fact that it has already been played three times, requests have been pouring in for yet another performance. The management has replied to the demand by advertising a final performance of the famous play for next Friday night.

Saturday will see the company in a new piece entitled "Please Get Married." It is a farce of the rapid order, and gives Miss Florence Chapman a big chance. It had a successful run in New York recently.

"The Lion and the Mouse" will be offered tomorrow night. It is a powerful play calling for large setting, and fine portrayals. We can leave it safely in the hands of the Denniston Players. On Wednesday the farce "Nightie Night" a great favorite of Miss Wanda Howard's will be produced, and on Thursday, farce will again give way to drama, when the company will play "The Co-Respondent."

LONDON MUSICAL COMEDY CO.

"Wally" Barnard is opening up at the Olympic Theatre next Thursday and from the look of the plays, and the names of some of the players, it promises to be a great night. I know nothing about "Plums for Pickins" or "Girls and Giggles" but both names sound good to the musical comedy lover.

When the P. and O. Liner Khyber came into port some days ago, its engaging purser called, and brought with him the following letter from our old friend Llewellyn

Jones—who by the way is on his way back to Shanghai—

"Dear Domino:
"Passengers by the P. and O. Liner Khyber are unanimous in praising Miss Maude Lake who travelled out with them to take up the leading roles with the Banvard Musical Comedy Co., now playing at the Town Hall. On board the Khyber were some 250 officers and men of the relief naval crews and it was principally in the entertainment of these service men that Miss Lake won the hearts of the entire ship's company. Organising and rehearsing with them was evidently her greatest pleasure, and theirs, we need scarcely add.

"By accompanying the Naval vocalists she quickly drew out the talent, polished it brightly, and artistically, and eventually produced it of the Khyber's concert platform to the enjoyment of all.

"Even better, her own magnificent soprano of purest quality was never too tired to respond to the urgent appeals for more and still more.

"Miss Lake's glorious voice has of course gained for her most fame on the London stage and concert platforms, and even without this most truly priceless gift, such a delightful personality and natural charm must have won a measure of success, little if any, short of that which this young nightingale enjoys today. It is mostly with Mr. George Dance's London productions that Miss Lake's rapid ascent has been associated.

"The writer easily recalls her triumph as the Princess in 'The Quaker Girl', as Dolores in the revival of 'Floradora'. Again as the Princess in 'The Country Girl', in the lead in 'The Girl on the Film', and more recently, as 'Carmen' in 'Tina', and in the ever popular 'Bing Boys'.

I hear that Miss Lake has been doing a lot of work with the films recently and this is the first time that she has left the Old Country. She has been looking forward for some time past to visiting the Far East and hopes that local playgoers will like her singing and playing.

WEAR AND TEAR

She caught her train:
But here perhaps,
'Twas better to explain
'Twas in a nail
She caught her train.
Tearing after her train, I do declare
She found her train was tearing after her.

—Astley Weaver.

UNAPPRECIATED GRATITUDE
"You have saved my life," said the old man whom the young hero had just pulled out of the river. "As a reward you may marry my daughter there."

The hero glanced at the daughter, then grasped the old man.
"What are you doing?" asked the perplexed father. "Going to drop you in again," he replied.

COLD FEET

"Do you suffer from cold feet?" the doctor asked the young wife.
"Yes," she replied.
He promised to send her some medicine to take.

"Oh!" she said nervously. "They're not—er not—mine."

LIGHT HORSE AND ARTILLERY CAMP OVER HOLIDAYS
Gymkhana For Horsemen And Varied Program Today For Artillery

Both the Light Horse Company and the Field Artillery Battery, S. V. C. are holding their annual Eastern Camp during the holidays. The horsemen at Kiangwan and the artillerymen at the Rifle Range will take place this afternoon. Eighty men have turned out for the Light Horse Gymkhana and 40 for the Artillery program.

In Kiangwan, the Light Horse will hold their annual gymkhana and will include a test pegging competition, sword thrusting, intersection competitions for the Nugent Challenge Cup, bare back racing, Victoria Cross competition, Balachava mace and a mounted tug of war.

A challenge cup, at present in the hands of Captain McMichael, will go to the man who gains the most points.

The Nugent Challenge Cup will be fought for under the following conditions:

Start dismounted with saddles on the ground. Saddle up and ride off in section formation to given point on Rifle Range (100 yards

CHINA OLYMPIC TEAM SLOWLY ASSUMES FORM

Reports From Many Sections Tell Of Men Available For May Games

NOT ONLY FOR STUDENTS

Returned Men, Those In Business And Others Interested Urged To Try Out

As interest begins to increase throughout China for the Far Eastern Games to be held from May 30 to June 4, reports are beginning to come in to headquarters as to possible material in the way of athletes and teams to represent China.

In general the major proportion of the track and field men will come from North and East China; the swimmers, football players, volleyball players from South China. In basketball, there are several groups which are anxious to try out, while the baseball team will probably be recruited in Shanghai and vicinity.

R. W. Clark of Paoingfu, who headed China's team to Manila last time, reports a javelin thrower who will probably be able to make a team. He also has a pole vaulter who can do more than ten feet, and a hurdler who is a youngster but shows great promise. The fourth man from that area is a high jumper, who is also showing good form.

R. A. Leake of Foochow, who was one of the coaches accompanying the team to Manila, reports that a dozen long distance men are grinding the road daily in preparation for the mile, five-mile, modified marathon, and possibly the full marathon runs. Several of these are already within the minimum requirements for inclusion in China's team.

AMOY HAS POLE VAULTER

Another long distance man is the winner of the Fukien Provincial mile and half-mile races from Amoy, who is also rounding into shape and bringing along with him two or three other men who ought to measure up to his class. Amoy also has a pole vaulter who does better than ten feet. The pole vaulters with a little coaching should rise rapidly in height. In addition, Amoy reports a sprinter who may possibly qualify.

Word comes from Nankai College, Tientsin, of a mile runner who is practically sure of a place on the team.

In the decathlon and pentathlon, the only prospective entries at the present time are two men in Foochow, one of whom is reported to have exceeded the record made by Chu En-te in Manila in 1919.

Considerable rivalry exists between Foochow and Amoy as a result of the meet last Fall, and Bradshaw reports that his men are anxious to meet Foochow's group before final selections are made. Bradshaw's volleyball team is also anxious to try for a place and the Contest Committee has recommended that they take up the matter with Hongkong and Canton, and is willing to abide by their decision in the matter.

News from East China and North China will necessarily be slow, owing to the students' strikes and unsettled conditions in these parts of the country, but all in all, prospects are brightening, and we shall ere long be able to name the possible contestants for China's team in the Fifth Far Eastern Championships.

NOT ONLY FOR STUDENTS

The idea is too frequently suggested that the Far Eastern Games, so far as China is concerned, are only for students. This is not so. Any returned students, men in business or commercial life, or any other Chinese citizen is eligible for the games; and he feels that he has latent talent, he should make special effort to get in touch with the authorities, who will give him help in developing what talent he has. China needs the help of every athlete who can get into the lists.

St. John's Wins East China I.A.A. Basketball Title

The Inter-Collegiate basketball season of 1921 was a comparatively short one. The six colleges that entered the championship series were restricted in their play by the fact that the three colleges outside Shanghai, and the three in Shanghai had to play a preliminary round, each with their own group.

Soochow University, by defeating the University of Nanking, and Nanking Teachers' College became champions of the outside Shanghai group. St. John's, by defeating Shanghai College and Nanyang College, came through in the lead in the Shanghai group. On March 19, St. John's decisively defeated Soochow University on neutral grounds, thereby gaining the E.C.I.A.A. championship. On Wednesday they added to their laurels by defeating the Shanghai Chinese Y.M.C.A. quintet, hitherto undefeated by any other Chinese team, thus giving them a claim to the East China title. The "Y" quintet was defeated by a score of 24-18.

Though it was unfortunate that there were so few games, yet it is notable that each of the three played by St. John's, and the one staged by the Y.M.C.A. later, were all under totally different conditions so that the team had plenty of opportunity to show what it could do. The men played through the whole season with but one substitution, and "no time out" for injuries. The team commenced the season with a win, but one new man, the center, who was considered a "find."

John's 66; Shanghai College. 8.
March 12 on the Nanyang court.
St. John's 28; Nanyang, 25.
March 19 on the Nanyang field.
St. John's 34; Soochow University 5.
In the three intercollegiate games, St. John's shot 53 field goals and 12 goals from the foul line, getting 138 points to the opponents' 38. Of the 138 points scored, C. H. Tsau was responsible for 78; K. L. Ou, 22; Z. H. Ling, 12; K. T. Yang, 12; and Capt. Mo, 4.

Hongkong Winner Of 'Y' Hexathlon; Tientsin Is Second

As one of the regular features of the Young Men's Christian Association's physical work throughout China, and also as a means of encouraging men to come out for the Far Eastern Games, city associations throughout China have, during the last two weeks, been holding their annual Inter-Association hexathlon contest. This is a six-event program consisting of a 60 yard potato race, 160 yard potato race, running high jump, fence vault, standing board jump and 12-pound shot put.

While primarily arranged for indoor work, it can also be conducted out of doors, and where Associations have not had indoor equipment, the latter has been done.

Ten senior Associations reported, and two junior. In the senior contest, the Hongkong Chinese Y. M. C. A. heads the list with a total of 2,378 points; Tientsin is second, with 2,058 points; Paoingfu is third with 1,967. Following in order are Foochow, Tsinan, Canton, Amoy, Nanchang, Kaifeng, and Hangchow.

A handsome trophy will be awarded to Hongkong, winning these events, and if these figures exceed those made by Associations in the Philippines, India, Mexico, or South America, Hongkong will become the world's champion outside of the United States, Canada, and Europe.

The junior contest, although limited to two groups, was close. Amoy winning first place with a total of 2,623 points, while Paoingfu was a close second with 2,558 points.

The individual all-round champion in this contest was Ma Tsing-po, who, though under 19 years of age, competed in both the junior and senior events, and won in individual points in both cases, securing a total of 558 points, with records as follows:

160 yd. potato race 44-1/5 sec.
Running High Jump 5 ft. 4 1/2 in.
Fence Vault 5 ft. 8 1/2 in.
Standing board jump 9 feet.
8-lb. shot put 41 ft. 7 in.

From all angles the contest this year was a decided success and leads one to believe that double the number of Associations will take part next year.

Conspicuous by their absence from this list are Shanghai, Hangchow, and Peking, while the smaller Associations, such as Kaifeng and Nanchang, are certainly to be congratulated.

Hongkong Riflemen Would Compete With Shanghai; S.R.A. Meeting Comes In May

Singapore, Unable To Enter, Should Withdraw From Interport Competition, Says "Critic"; Snake On Trail Of Benevolent Fund Shield

(By Rifle Critic)

Once again Shanghai's Rifle shots are to be disappointed that there will not be an interport shoot.

Hongkong, which is the senior port, has informed the S. R. A. that Penang and Singapore are unable to put up teams to compete for the interport shield. It is high time that the four ports Hongkong, Penang, Singapore, and Shanghai altered the present rules governing this match, so that it shall be competed for annually whether all the ports can put up a team or not. As it is now Singapore are the holders, and because they cannot put up a team there is no competition.

The Great War was a very good excuse a couple of years back, but that excuse should not be allowed to work now. To make a long story short Singapore should send the shield to Hongkong, and thus allow Shanghai and Hongkong to compete for it. If the present conditions are allowed to stand, Singapore need never compete again, and yet hold for ever and a day the valuable shield, which was subscribed for equally by all four ports. It is to be hoped that Singapore and Penang will tumble to this fact, and say "Well, we cannot compete, but let the ports that can put up a team do so, and as soon as we can get together we will endeavor to win it back." How about that sportsmanship?

Hongkong has suggested a friendly match with Shanghai. The S. R. A. Committee have decided to accept this proposal, but why should we start another interport shoot when there is already one in existence which is not carried out. This would be another fine opportunity for either Hongkong or Shanghai to register a win on another shield and then fail in the future to compete, and so retain the shield on the grounds that so and so does not permit entering a team.

BENEVOLENT FUND SHIELD

Twenty months ago "Well Wisher" presented a shield to the S.R.A. for competition between all classes on an allowance basis. Although a couple of hundred dollars have been realised, that is by no means satisfactory. Billed down it means to say that the "Pot Hunters" have not supported the competition, because the bank-breaking amount of one dollar per month as entrance fee and the uncertainty of winning it outright did not appeal to their sporting instinct.

Very strange to say that on an S.R.A. monthly shoot where there is no entrance fee some 45 to 60 competitors take part. The average competitors in the shield competition range from nine to fourteen. What a lot a dollar will do in this war world.

Mr. F. W. Snake is leading with 96 points, and only requires another four points to win the trophy outright. The conditions call for any one individual making 100 points to be the winner of the shield outright. Congratulations to Mr. Snake, and may he get the desired four points next month.

ANNUAL RIFLE MEETING

The 20th Annual Rifle Meeting of the S.R.A. will take place on May 21, 22, 23 and 24. An excellent program has been prepared and should appeal to all members of the S.R.A. There will be the ladies prize and six other events. The ladies prize will consist of one sash and seven scoring shots at 200, 500 and 600 yards. The other events will consist of 10 scoring shots at each range with no sighter. It has also been decided that individuals will shoot in their own class only.

There are five classes. There will be three prizes in each class for each of the events from event 2 to 7. In event 1 the champions winning for their ladies will receive a spoon. Last year was a record entry for the ladies prize. There will be 131 prizes in all, made up as follows:

Prizes	Prizes
3 prizes for each class in each event (events 2 to 7) 90	5 prizes for each class—Class Aggregate 25
1 prize for each class—Class Championship 5	1 prize for each class—Central Bulls Eye Prize 5
2 prizes open to any class—Tyro Aggregate 1	1 prize open to any class—All Corners Bulls Eye Central 1
3 prizes open to any class—Highest Aggregate, Gold, Silver and Bronze Crosses 3

The committee is in indebtedness to all competitors who have decided to shoot under the same conditions, therefore there will be no consideration for Sunday observers.

The time-table printed in the program will be strictly adhered to.

S.R.A. MEMBERSHIP
Membership of the association is open to the defence forces of Shanghai and such others as may be approved of by the Committee. The annual subscription is $5.00, and there is no entrance fee. The secretary of the Association is Mr. A. M. Collaço, care of Russo Asiatic Bank. He will be pleased to receive applications for membership at anytime.

TWODEADHEATS AT I.R.C. MEET; GOOD DIVIDENDS

Holiday Crowd Sees Snappy Racing At Kiangwan On Muddy Course

HILL THRICE WINNER

Dalgarno Rides Djennah To Victory In Steeplechase; Happy Day Pays $200

The first day of the Easter Race meet of the International Recreation Club, held today at Kiangwan, was featured by two dead heats, one for the first position and one for third; and the scoring of the rank outsiders. Other winners were fairly well backed. Three favorites won. The track was muddy but safe. There were still pools of Friday's rain on the steeplechase course. The coolness of the day did not discourage a holiday attendance.

The first race resulted in the first dead heat—a rousing finishing of a rather uninteresting race. Kashima got off ahead from the post, and led the race all the way, with the others strung out over a long stretch. Golden Knob ran a hard race, and managed to catch Kashima at the last jump. The next dead heat came in the tenth, the Nanyang Stakes, when The Curlew and Mikasa tied for third position. The finish was close-up, all around, with every jockey driving hard. Happy Day, a rank outsider, at a $200 price, lead all the way, with Side-way and Mikasa following in turn. The Curlew, the favorite, came bravely to the end, but could do no better than share honors for third.

OUTSIDER IS WINNER
Kewick, in the third was the first outsider to win. With sixteen starters, it was anyone's race until the final few jumps. The three that showed were fortunate in getting off well, and the others in the bunch, never had a chance of working through. The winner paid $103.10.

The closest contest of the day came in the Yangtze Stakes, the fourth event. The horses were bunched all the way around, Kongo, slightly in the van. The Oriole, Masurek, and Kongo came down the stretch abreast, each straining its best, and the race was in doubt until the last step. It looked like another dead heat, but Hill got a final spur out of the Oriole, and won by a very short head, with Masurek a bare length second.

The Easter Maiden Steeplechase handicap, furnished a race of real interest. It went to Djennah, after a clever bit of handling by Dalgarno. The going was hard, with several of the jumps landing pools of rain. Nobody fell. Wild Cat, Spring Bird and Wemac did all the running during the first half, with Djennah gradually working its way up into place, to second, and finally to a win.

The Easter Selling Plate, won by The Prince, is a pretty race, resulted in that horse being acquired off in the paddock in Mr. T. Chu, for the fancy price of $360. The Prince was a race easily, coming up from behind Lightning Ralder, Cuckfield and Ocean Star, and passing them each in turn.

HILL AND MARLOW

Mr. Hill handled his mount nicely in the second race. The Easter Playaway Plate, off poorly, in a pocket composed of seven others, all closely bunched, he rode Marlow, through the opened-up group from the entrance to the stretch to a close finish, barely beating out Moonlighter and Struma for the honor.

Darting ran away with the Sixth. Crockam got the horse off well, and established a big lead, which he held to the finish. The race was never in doubt.

Mr. White tried the same runaway tactics with Good Boy in the Seventh. He got off to a big lead, leaving the field bunched far behind him, but his mount couldn't last. Near the mile he slackened back, and Day Star, the favorite, assumed the lead, and won easily.

The Easter Stakes went to Christmas Bell after a very consistent race. On second the horse gradually crawled up to the front, and finished three quarters of a length to the good. Red Paper, a hot tip, as a "dark horse", was pocketed among the sixteen runners, and never got its chance at running.

The last race was Devotion's until the very finish. Carlington came up at the needed moment and beat Devotion by one length. Harding was a good third. China Star, much favored in the betting, never had a chance. Mr. Hill had his opening coming down the straightaway, but his mount was not equal to the speed.

The Novices Race.—Value $400, second pony, $150, third pony, $100. For griffins of 1921. Weight for inches as per scale. To be ridden by jockeys who have not won more than five races. Jockeys to carry one pound extra for winning mount. Non-winning jockeys, who have started or not allowed seven lbs. Maidens allowed five lbs. Winners of two or more races, five lbs. extra. VICTORIA THEATER
What should a man do when he wakes up to the fact that he has married the wrong woman? Buy some mercury bichloride, call up his attorney, or buckle down to make the best of it? This interesting problem will be submitted to silent discussion on the screen at the Victoria Theater to-night, in the presentation of Ivan Abramson's social drama, "The Wrong Woman." Reno papers please copy.

APOLLO COMEDY PROGRAM
A piece of red hair clutched in the fingers of a man found dead in his apartment meant serious trouble for five women, all of whom, for reasons of jealousy or unappreciated love had apparent motives for desiring his death.

The result of this complication is a breath-taking mystery play entitled "Empty Pockets," to be shown next Thursday at the Apollo. Tomorrow at 8:30 p.m. a six-part comedy film will be featured, showing the adventures of Max Linder, Parisian boulevardier, in one of the cafes which every American tourist rushes off by himself to visit as soon as his wife gets interests in the hat shops.

MARIE WALCAMP AGAIN
At the Isis Theater tomorrow night, Marie Walcamp will continue her search through two more episodes for the petals of Lao-Tze, in the only screen drama ever filmed in China, Japan and the Philippines. The story of "The Dragon's Net" concerns the ambition of a pretty American girl to possess an ancient Chinese treasure and the attempt of the Taoist hierarchy to check her by tangles of Oriental intrigue. The feature of today's program is "The River's End," a tale of love and adventure in the forests of the Canadian Northwest.

AT THE OLYMPIC
Another film of Chinese life, which was not produced in the Far East but which makes up for that deficiency by the power of the story and the attractiveness of the star is "The Forbidden City," shown today at the Olympic Theater with Norma Talmadge in the leading role. Even Paris is Startled

Respect for Things Sacred

in M. Bataille's
New Play

Andre Brule, Who Plays the Leading Part of "Don Juan" in the Piece. The Costume Is of Silver Brocade, and This Has Been Objected To By the Critics as Making the Old Rouse Look Like a Glistening Fish.

PARIS, Jan. 25. THE religious world of Paris, both Catholic and Protestant, is shocked beyond measure at the extraordinary daring of Henry Bataille's new play, "L'Homme a la Rose"—the Man with the Rose. It is not that the costumes are too scant nor because the lines of the play are unfit for public utterance, nor because the episodes and scenes are exceptionally wicked or disgusting.

The outcry of protest and indignation against their outraged feelings is because of the astonishing lack of respect for things sacred and religious.

The famous playwright chose the historic Don Juan for his theme. No objection would have been raised against recasting this notorious rascal as his hero. But when the playwright chooses the sacred precincts of a cathedral as a place to develop and exploit all this cynical, worldly jesting and ribaldry he has gone a little further than even a person without any professed religious scruples can accept without a shudder.

When a Bataille play is announced in Paris it is looked upon as a great event in the theatrical world. When Bataille gave out that he would produce "L'Homme a la Rose" he surrounded the piece with so much mystery and secrecy, not even intimating what the subject of the play would be—which could never be surmised from the title itself—and promised such surprises that all Paris was on the qui vive. When the general rehearsal was announced there was a rush to obtain tickets, which on such occasions are invitation affairs.

But the favored few who were to witness the first production of his new play had been chosen by the author himself, who, claiming to himself the prerogative that comes to genius to do things in some extraordinary way, insisted upon having the whole house turned over to him to invite whom he wished. When this was known the demand for tickets became greater, and as much as a thousand francs a seat was offered. The interest in the play was as great as that shown in the first production of Rostand's "Chantecler," though more restricted and not international.

A magnificent sight was presented when the audience gathered for the first night of "L'Homme a la Rose." The Theatre de Paris was crowded with the elite of Paris, of the worlds of society, letters, politics, art and the stage. A great actress, who would be touching elbows with some famous society leader. The house was a veritable exposition of the people who are making Paris what it is in art, literature and science.

Andre Brule appeared in the principal role and it was discovered that the play was written on Don Juan and his historic love adventures.

Bataille is perhaps original in having taken the decadence of the great lover, Don Juan, for the theme of his play. The play opens at a time when Don Juan, steeped in licentiousness and dissipation, tiring of his many love affairs, asks a friend to take his place in a rendezvous which he has made with a duchess. The friend accepts and the frivolous wife is awaiting her adventure with the noted lover on her balcony.

The dual husband returns unexpectedly and kills the supposed Don Juan, disfigure

ing his face with his sword. Don Juan, seeing the incident and the possibilities of it, enters the house unseen and places in the pocket of the dead man his memoirs, upon which he has been working. The finding of these identify the disguised man as the noted Don Juan, and a great funeral is arranged for him, his memoirs being interred with the body of the supposed Don Juan.

The second act is placed in the Cathedral of Seville. It is a wonderful setting; the great pillars of the church, ornamented with figures of the Virgin, the golden grill with the chancel behind it, the fonts of holy water, the candles burning everywhere, the confessionals and small chapels reproduced with a fidelity much too exact to please those who have a reverence for holy things. And this is the setting in which Bataille chose to unfold the superlatively philosophies of a wicked Don Juan!

Don Juan has come to attend the last obsequies over his supposed body. In attending his own funeral he brought his friend with him. All the magnificence and pomp of a Spanish Catholic funeral are faithfully portrayed. The pageant of the priests and bishops, with their acolytes, Franciscan monks in sombre robes contrasting strongly with the wonderfully costumed major-domos; the coffin, black and foreboding, illumined with numerous candles, carried on the shoulders of four penitents, gowned, as is the custom of the persons who perform this service, in brilliant red, with mask-like hoods covering the entire head, holes for the eyes intensifying the gruesome effect; the mourners following, each costume a work of art designed from the old Spanish masters—all these give a realistic effect that caused a genuine emotion, for it was difficult to appreciate you were not actually attending Don Juan's funeral yourself as you sat in the audience.

As the Mass proceeds Don Juan and his friend comment upon the mourners who are present. They watch them come and go as they pay their last respects to the dead debauchee. They see many of the former loves of Don Juan enter—some grief-stricken, others indifferent and others in seeming satisfaction.

Don Juan, from behind a pillar of the church, recounts his adventures as they are recalled to him by seeing his former loves. He does not spare his victims. He ridicules the husbands whose wives he had stolen as they pass by and jeers at the frailty of women. He flays them all, without respect, with his cynical philosophy.

But his over-riding vanity and egoism get the best of him, and he desires to know what these old loves now think of now that he is dead and gone. He sends his friend to intercept them as they come from the service to question them. He remains in the background listening to what they have to say.

He points out one with whom he had been in love for ten years, but had parted with five years before, and sends his friend to speak with her. He asks her if she would like some little souvenir of Don Juan, as he was his friend and would obtain it for her. She is indifferent and merely thanks him, turning to leave. Don Juan urges his friend to detain her, so he asks her if she would like to see a man who resembles her former lover greatly.

She turns, without emotion, and asks where he is. The friend points to the real Don Juan standing there, but the woman merely smiles and says he is but a poor and unworthy imitation of the man she once loved, and, bowing, leaves the church. Don Juan is disgusted. He takes a mirror from his pocket and looks at himself, saying to his friend that it is not possible that he could have changed so in five years.

A young girl enters and commences her devotions before the confessional. Don Juan is attracted by her. He turns to his friend and tells him he has won queens in five minutes and that he would win the sixteen-year-old girl in two. He approaches her, first excusing himself, saying for her to continue her prayers as he is not in a hurry. She accepts his excuses and continues her devotions more earnestly, trying to avoid him. He persists, wicked and accomplished as he is in all the graces that win women's hearts, and so apt in all the snares that beguile women.

She is annoyed and afraid and rushes for protection into the confessional, where Don Juan follows, first asking his friend to sing a serenade, which he does, using his sword as a mock guitar. The girl comes out of the confessional, trying to disengage herself from Don Juan's embraces, calling him vile names. She finally frees herself, and as she goes out the door hurls back at him an epithet in which he is referred to as "old," and this being told he was old was the hardest thing for Don Juan to bear. Again out comes his mirror and he confesses to his friend that he has received the first rebuff of his life.

He is worried and philosophizes on age, but the appearance of a common girl of the street, who rushes into the church, mad with grief and in bitter anguish throws herself down upon the stone floor in an agony of sorrow, attracts him. Don Juan regards her, but does not know her. His friend cannot enlighten him either. Who can this grief-stricken woman be? He covers his face with his cloak and approaches her, asking if all these tears were for Don Juan. When she replies affirmatively he is more perplexed.

He couldn't remember her. When he asked her if she had seen Don Juan often, she replied only once at a fete in Seville, but for fifteen years he had ever been in her heart and mind. This flattered Don Juan, after the rebuffs he had received, and he revealed himself to her. She recognized him at once and, screaming with fear, sought to run away. Don Juan held her hand long enough to make a rendezvous for that evening in the market place!

Don Juan is pleased. He boasts to his friend that time had not changed him as he thought when a woman who had seen him once remembered him with love for fifteen years! This was his consolation!

His first mistress, old and pompous, comes out, supported by her ladies. As she passes she scatters roses in her path, and when she has gone out he spits, in disgust, at her feet. A poet friend comes from the services apothecizing Don Juan, saying that he will make a famous book and play of his history. Don Juan's vanity is fed, and when the poet leaves he is in a quandary whether to remain dead as a great man or to take the chance, in having a resurrection, of outliving his greatness.

He tosses a coin to decide and his death is decided upon. He breaks his sword, scatters the petals of a rose over it when he has crossed the pieces on the floor, and sprinkles it with holy water! Then he leaves the church to seek obscurity for the rest of his life.

The wildest imagination could not conceive of a man daring to place such action within a church when a service for the dead was going on. If it could it would certainly indicate a depravity of mind and utter disregard for the holiness of sacred things that one could not believe to exist even in this materialistic age! But it has been done, and, while it may be artistic blasphemy to say it, Bataille is the man who has done it!

In the third act Don Juan has become the keeper of an inn. His reputed memoirs, as false to the truth as they were in the roseate glow in which his poet friend's imagination had embellished them, were the sensation of the day. Everyone was reading of the famous love hero. Don Juan read his supposed memoirs with disgust. His silvered hair and advancing age did not take from him that which was the motive of his life. He is trying to win a princess. He tries all his wiles upon her. But she tells him that glory and fame for her are the only things that she could love in a man!

He is surprised when she confesses to him that she prefers an old, almost decrepit general, made famous by many wars, to him, a younger man but only an inn-keeper! Don Juan becomes frantic in his appeal to her, and finally tells her in desperation that he is greater than any one, for he is the famous Don Juan! She ridicules him and thinks that he has gone insane as he insists. She calls in the others to share in the ridicule.

The sacrilegious features of the play have so incensed the newspapers of Paris which have Catholic affiliations that they have ignored the piece entirely, after vainly having protested against its production to the police authorities. But the "Came-lots du Roi," the young student element of the supporters of the Royalists, have been more active. They have sent their threats of personal violence to Andre Brule, as well as to Bataille. It is hardly possible that any manager will dare to produce the play or a motion picture version of it in America.

Gracefully Draped Gown of Printed Taffeta, With Corsage of Shadow Lace.

By Lady Duff-Gordon ("Lucile")

GOWNS should strike the keynote of the occasion. If the gown is out of key with the event the result is discord. The difference between good and bad dressing is the harmony of the hour, the place and the apparel.

If we go into a palm room and see there a woman in severe tailor costume, linen collar, cravat and plain sailor hat we feel that she is the jarring note in the symphony of the hour. For the palm room is a place of festivity. Its meaning is enjoyment. Its function is merry-making.

For such a place and for the afternoon or evening the large left-hand figure offers the appropriate suggestion. Black satin is the foundation of this chic robe. Over the satin is a fitted tunic of net, deeply flounced. The flounces have a border of monkey fur. The girdle presents a color note in satin and in silk flowers. The neck is cut low. The gown is sleeveless. A draped hat of cloth of gold has enormous tufts of bird of paradise feathers.

The middle figure shows another palm garden gown. This one is of printed taffeta. Draped gracefully about the figure, with bouffant effect at the hips, the silk is faced at the edges with satin of contrasting color. The high, crush, graduated girdle is defined on the upper side by the contrasting satin. The corsage is of shadow lace. Heavy gold lace of large

Novel is the third of these palm garden gowns. Over a satin slip net is gathered in moderately full folds at the belt line. The corsage is of net arranged in modified surplice effect in front. The skirt and the corsage and sleeves are lavishly trimmed with many narrow horizontal bands of patent leather. To spare the impression of uncompromising severity the costume has the graceful touch of a wide border of shadow lace around the edge of the skirt. Patent leather is arranged ribbon-like in narrow bands around the neck, in a bow at the belt line in front and in long streamers. The hat, softly and becomingly draped, is made of net and trimmed with a band and bows of patent leather.

Paris Says Taffeta For Frocks

BY ANNE RITTENHOUSE
(New York Herald, April 6)

If the Americans won't take taffeta by the yard, let them take it in ribbon and build frocks. Such is the decree of the Paris dressmakers.

Whether or not this decree comes about through a paucity of fabric in the French markets or from obstinacy in holding the two fabrics—taffeta and crepe de chine—in the first place of fashion, is immaterial. The fact which is about to govern our newest gowns is that these two materials will be employed to build a vast and diverse number of garments.

We have not had the crepe de chine obsession over here. Buyers who brought back clothes from France had chosen more variety in fabrics than the French houses offered and had expressed themselves as somewhat perplexed as to the loyalty shown by crepes and mances to the one kind of weave for all kinds of gowns. That might do for one city, they said, but not a continent.

Duvetyn caught us right and good. It swirled over the continent like a storm. Every woman was snatched up by it, although warnings were sent out broadcast as to its ability to percolate. But the time for this variety and dangerous yet altogether lovely fabric is passing. In the Northern climate the weave will be suitable and comfortable for two months yet, but the trend of thought is toward the immediate future. What we will wear is the problem shaping in our minds. The answer seems to be taffeta and crepe de chine. We are to take up the French fashion, you see, MUST REGARD HER OWN TYPE.

It is wise for a woman to regard well her own figure and type as she approaches a season devoted to the adoption of these two materials. It may not be necessary for her to choose between them. If she is exempt from the troublesome and vexatious business of always making a choice of trying to be fashionable and not unlovely at the same time, then let her trip lightly into any shop or dressmaking house and pick up at random that which is put before her and which pleases her whim or wish.

The perplexed majority are not as these. They must bring more judgment and shrewdness than inclination and money to the proposition of a new frock or an entire seasonal wardrobe. They will find themselves at the crossroads between taffeta and crepe de chine as soon as the last vestige of their winter clothes has given its ultimate service. They will find that the dressmakers and shops have decried both materials good in their sight and propose to make a rich harvest with them.

The reason they will be placed between two choices is this: That crepe is for the large, the full, the florid; taffeta is for the small, the pale, the slender. Yet each woman will ask herself each time she views the fabrics whether she is too large to wear the one or too thin to wear the other. Such is the influence of fashion.

Taffeta presents the more acute problem. It cannot be built up into fulness like crepe. It stands but stiffly from the figure even when plainly cut and adjusted. If it has ruffles and puffs it becomes impossible for the big woman.

Crepe has the disadvantage of clinging without any effort of concealment to every bone of the body. It is a revealing and a disillusioning fabric. Fortunately, there is no intention of building up with severity upon any kind of figure, for it is preeminently the fabric for drapery; but no amount of pointed cascades or irregular loop keeps it from plainly disclosing whatever anatomical deficiencies one may wish to conceal.

Through these qualities it gives, therefore, grace to the large and somewhat dominating figure. Taffeta gives added bulk and a strain of awkwardness to any but the willowy. There is the choice.

As Mr. Chesterton in his American lectures has scoffed at the ignorance of the educated when they refer to British and American stock as Anglo-Saxons, it may be better to find another label for the type of woman we are inclined to define in that manner—at least, to find another label while Mr. Chesterton is in the country and is making us self-conscious about our daily mistakes. So suppose we say the "big woman" is wiser if she looks at taffeta from a safe distance, leaving its evident popularity to that new type of woman that has grown, seemingly, to fit the present fashions.

The insistence upon this slightly silk with its dominating character is due, undoubtedly, to the stern efforts of a certain set of designers to coerce women into wearing clothes that are a mixture between old Spanish and Victorian-France. Probably it is better to designate the 1870 fashions Eugenie-French, for the Empress did go into society and liked it, whereas it was the custom of the English smart set to say with a contemptuous shrug that "the Queen was not in society." Reminiscent, isn't it, of the way smart Washington has talked of its President?

Whatever the source of distended skirts, wide hems, tight bodices and small sleeves, the fact remains that French leaders are doing their best to make them a part of the present fashion.

The Americans who have been meeting in council to ordain a purely national silhouette for this spring have dropped from Napoleon the Little to Napoleon the Big and launched the Directoire.

One country wants the tight, slim bodice extending to the hips, the other wants the high waist encircled under the bust. The more diversity the merrier. Let us welcome all obstacles to moulding women into one form, one fashion. It makes for a gay and harmless war, although it may puzzle the manufacturers a bit.

Whatever silhouette taffeta may assume it seems to be reasonably clear that the Egyptian, the Oriental, the Northern African will not do. If the French win, or if the Americans win, there's an end to primitiveness in the result.

Taffeta is a sophisticated fabric. It ends itself to artificiality and it expresses itself best in eras when lines and curves are built, not revealed.

Looking at it in that light it has deep significance. If it comes into general usage now it will express itself as always, and that alone means an abrupt turn about from what has endured for years.

You can see, can't you, how the two fabrics, both offered for the spring and both launched at Palm Beach in new gowns with equal success, mean more than an idle whim on the part of the designers who rule the destinies of our wardrobes and by the same token, our finances?

RIBBON FOR NEW TAFFETA
The American dressmakers say that Lanvin launched ribbon evening frocks in order to use up the vast quantities of manufactured ribbon which have pyramided through negligence of the public. Never have ribbons been more beautifully woven. Yet the counters bear miles of them. They are expensive; that's the reason for their surplus today.

Women have hesitated to buy an accessory at a huge price when they could get material by the yard without paying more.

When the economist snatches at the idea of building a quantity of ribbon frocks at a small outlay she is reckoning without the cost. One hour at a ribbon counter will send her away wiser. The dressmakers have no hesitancy in using these widely expensive fabrics, for they do not want to lower the price of their gowns, but the home dressmaker will think thrice and then not act.

And such ribbons are chosen to build these new taffeta frocks that are to oust the Egyptian restore artificiality, build up new curves.

They are as colorful as the Pharaohs would have liked. They have the glory that is ancient Chinese. They are heavily designed in flowers in stripes with the former given the preference. They are not altogether unlike much of the taffeta by the yard, but as they are a bit more sensational, they are launched in the extreme types of the approaching fashion.

They accentuate the wide effort to displace plain materials with flowered ones upon which the conservative look with a wary eye. And well they may. The Looms seem to have thrown themselves into a fervor of ecstasy in creating figurations for women to bear upon their bodies. The shops cry aloud these waves. The ready-to-wear people—and that includes some of the smartest houses—push forward the flowered fabrics to all corners. It is not difficult to foretell weariness before the season is well advanced, because numbers of women will buy such clothes in abundance because they are "the style."

Voile, georgette, silks, cottons, even linens, bear the impress of the colored stamp. When plain fabrics are used they are bordered, faced or lined with something figured. When a patchwork quilt can be used for a straight sport coat without criticism, only approval, then the day of figuration is surely here. True, the work on the quilt is that of an artist and the colors and designs are as satisfying as those on an ancient vase—but the fact remains that a quilt is a quilt.

And that is not the end of quilt usage; there's a sport skirt built of a white Marseilles spread that carries a gay and ornamental jacket and the effect is not one to cause laughter. And furthermore, there's a silk blanket in broad subdued plaids made into a loose straight sport jacket to be worn with an orange linen skirt at Coronado Beach.

TODAY'S TOILET HINTS.

A RARE COLLECTION ON BEAUTY HINTS FROM NEAR AND FAR. HOME RECIPES.

Getting Rid of Feminine Moustaches.

"Practical Suggestions."

To women who are annoyed by disfiguring downy hair growths a method of permanently eradicating the same will come as a piece of good news. For this purpose pure powdered phenol may be used. Almost any chemist should be able to supply an ounce of this drug. The recommended treatment is designed not only to remove the disfiguring growth instantly, leaving no trace, but also to actually kill the hair roots without irritating the skin.

How to have Thick and Pretty Hair.

"Home Talents."

Soaps and artificial shampoos ruin many beautiful heads of hair. Few people know that a teaspoonful of good starch dissolved in a cup of hot water has a natural affinity for the hair and makes the most delightful shampoo imaginable. It leaves the hair brilliant, soft and wavy, cleanses the scalp completely and greatly stimulates the hair growth. The only draw-back is that starch seems rather expensive. It comes to the chemist only in sealed 1/4 lb. packages, which retail at half-price. However, as this is sufficient for twenty-five or thirty shampoos, it really works out very cheaply in the end.

Blackheads, Oily Pores, etc.

A unique new method instantly removes and corrects them.

The new sparkling face-bath treatment rids the skin of blackheads, oiliness and enlarged pores almost instantly. It is perfectly harmless, pleasant and immediately effective. All you have to do is to drop a styrol tablet, obtained from the chemist, in a glass of hot water, and after the resulting effervescence has subsided dab the affected portions of the face freely with the liquid. When you dry the face you will find that the blackheads come right off on the towel, the large pores contract and efface themselves and the greasiness is all gone, leaving the skin smooth, soft, and cool. This treatment should be repeated a few times at intervals of several days in order to make sure that the result shall be permanent.

Grey Hair Unnecessary.

A simple, old-fashioned home-made lotion that will restore the color of your hair.

One need not resort to the very questionable expedient of hair dye in order not to have grey hair. The grey hair can easily be changed back to a natural colour in a few days time merely by the application of a simple, old-fashioned and perfectly harmless home-made lotion. Procure from your chemist two ounces of tannic acid concentrate and mix it with three ounces of bay rum. Apply this to the hair a few times with a small sponge and you will soon have the pleasure of seeing your grey hair gradually darkening to the desired shade. The lotion is pleasant, not sticky or greasy, and does not injure the hair in any way.

Advice For The Motorist

A Series Of Semi-Technical Articles Designed To Introduce The Automoblist To His Own Car

THE ELECTRIC STARTER

I wonder how many automobile drivers have actually met Mr. Electric Starter in a face to face introduction. I would lay a bet that the proportion is less than one in ten. Possibly you have thought of the starter as some hidden bunch of gears and wires which came with the car, and nothing more. Let us start all over now and become friends through a better knowledge of what that little starter does for you.

INTRODUCTION

Get out that hand crank which you have carried under the rear seat ever since you have owned the car. Spin over the engine about 25 times without a stop, and you will have shaken Mr. Starter by the hand in a friendly realization of his powerful influence in the many trips he has taken with you.

After introduction comes friendship. Now get into your car and press down on that little starter button, and near Mr. Starter respond to your friendly request that he help you start your engine. He will turn that engine over about 300 to 400 times per minute for you.

CO-OPERATION

That is the key note of the success of many a business venture and all true friendship. What good is a friend if you can't do him a good turn, or go ask and receive a favor of some kind? If we did not need help we would not need any friends. The starter needs your help and you most certainly need his. The basis for co-operation is, therefore, complete and should be mutual.

When you twisted and turned and squirmed and panted and cussed and probably cursed in your effort to turn over that engine you were expending muscular energy. You were turning this muscular energy into mechanical energy. Mr. Starter also has a transformation to perform. He gets a supply of electrical energy from the battery and turns it into mechanical energy. It takes mechanical energy to start the engine turning in either case. The starter is just a little electric motor, the same as the one which runs the fan in your office. It receives its electric current from the storage battery, through the wires connected to it. The little brown plates of the battery find themselves all panned up in a jar with the very thing they want most, but separated from it by a wooden partition. This thing is the little gray plates. Both are hungry and know that they can have something to eat if they can in some way get in connection with each other. These plates have the power to change themselves into a powerful unseen agency of transmission of energy. They watch every chance, just like a panned up dog does, and at the first chance will change their soul into this unseen energy and go racing through the path provided between them.

This path is the wires from the positive terminal of the battery to the switch of the starter button, through the parts of the switch to the terminal on Mr. Starter and through the windings of the armature and fields, and finally back to the little gray plates, through the negative terminal of the battery. The brown plates have quite a supply of this unseen energy and will keep up the flow as long as the starter button is pressed down until the gray plates have absorbed their fill. When we press on the starter button, we simply complete this circuit between these brown and gray plates. Mr. Starter does not like this flow of unseen energy, and immediately proceeds to get rid of it in some way. He first tries to change it into heat and allow the wind to absorb it, but soon finds that he has more than he can handle this way, so he changes it into mechanical energy and gives it to us. All we have to do is to place Mr. Starter in the proper position and we can use this energy to turn the fly wheel.

To be able to change the unseen energy into mechanical energy Mr. Starter must cause something mechanical to move. He has a choice of moving either his field armature, and he tries to move both at once, and in opposite directions to each other. We can use this energy to a better advantage if just the armature turns so, we fasten the field frames of Mr. Starter to the frame of the engine or car so that it can't turn and make him apply all his force to turning the armature.

WHY THE ARMATURE TURNS

While the unseen energy is flowing through the windings inside the starter, it comes to places where it is forced to go round and round, a certain point on the armature. This will set up a center of action which we call a pole. If the current flows around in the same direction as the hands of a clock turn, there will be a south pole produced at that center of action. If the flow is reversed the pole will be a north center of action, North poles like south poles vary much and they will try to get to each other even if they have to move the thing they are attached to. The windings and connections are so made that the current flows through the coils on the fields and armature in such a direction as to produce north poles on the face of the armature, facing south poles on the fields. The north pole on the armature is not directly in line with the south of the field, but just a little to the right or left of the line. They will both try to move toward each other, but as the field is held steady, the armature coil will move toward the field coil. Just as they seem ready to clasp each other in their arms, the commutator, kills the center of action on the armature and produces another where the first one was before it moved. This one will try the same stunt and will also be killed before it can touch the south of the field. It is this process of switching which maintains the struggle of the coils to get to each other, and which keeps the armature turning. We use the effects of this turning by attaching a gear to the armature shaft, and letting it spend its effort in turning the fly wheel.

STARTS DISCONNECTS

It is easy enough to put a gear on the end of the armature shaft and have it mesh with the gear on the fly wheel, but what would happen to the poor little armature when the engine took up its work and turned that armature shaft, miles per hour? There are enough teeth on the fly wheel gear to allow the gear on the armature shaft to turn about 40 times while the fly wheel is making one turn. This makes it possible to use a very small motor as the leverage is great, and the speed of the armature may be very high, while that of the fly wheel is only a few hundred per minute. There are several ways in which to disengage the gears, but the most popular one is the Bendix Drive. This is a special shaft which is attached to the end of the armature shaft through a spring. It fits over the shaft. The outside of this extra shaft is threaded in large threads. The little gear is weighted on one side and is tapered with a thread which will fit those of the outside of the bendix shaft. When the started armature begins to turn, it will turn the bendix shaft, but the gear being weighted on one side will not get under way at once, and while it is hesitating the shaft will advance the gear along the threads and make it mesh with the gear on the fly wheel, when the latter will be turned.

When the engine takes up its work and the fly wheel is driven faster than the starter was turning it, the action will be reversed, and the little gear turned faster than the shaft is turning, which will drive the gear along its thread, and shaft and unmesh it from the fly wheel. There are several similar systems. The Delco system uses an over running clutch. This is an arrangement of wedges which allow the ring gear on the outside of the assembly to turn in one direction without turning the shaft, but will be driven in the same direction by the shaft turning faster. A back fire will cause the little wedges to be broken in this clutch.

RUBBING IT IN ON A FRIEND

Sometimes drivers will not have their battery charged when it should be, and Mr. Starter cannot turn the heavy engine over. He must get rid of the current flowing through him, so he turns it all into heat and burns the insulation off the wires. Sometimes we may forget to retard the spark and allow the engine to turn the fly wheel in the opposite direction, and catch the little gear in mesh with the big gear of the fly wheel, with the result that the little gear cannot get away and will turn the armature so fast that all the wires will be thrown out of the armature slots, making rewinding necessary.

There is a spring provided to take the sudden strains when the little gear takes up its work. This spring sometimes gets broken by the kick back of an engine. All things such as dust and grease should be washed off the spiral to allow the little gear a clear track to run on. In some of the Auto-lite starters furnished on the Overland and Chevrolet cars, the starter armature shaft bearings are of an oilless type. If we try to be good to the starter and oil these bearings we will have to buy new ones as this thin oil will wash all the graphite out of the grooves. Do not take pity on the commutator at all. It is properly oiled by the graphite in the brushes which ride on it. However, you will be doing the starter a good turn if you clean off the dirt from the commutator with a little fine sand paper. It doesn't like emery cloth, so don't use any. If the connection of the wires to the switch or starter become loose we must immediately tighten them again, because the energy flowing across this loose connection will have to work very hard and will set up a lot of heat which will burn the connections. We have seen starters connected to the battery through a set of wires which were not large enough to carry sufficient current, with the result that these wires got hot due to the little molecules of this unseen energy trying to flow through the small wire, and rubbing against each other with such force as to set up a high friction, which is always dissipated in heat.

AMERICAN AUTO EXPORTS SHOW BIG INCREASE

The year 1920 far surpassed all records for the export of passenger automobiles from the United States. In the first ten months 112,376 were sent abroad, as compared with 67,145 in 1919, the highest previous year, and 28,306 in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914, the highest pre-war year. Shipments to all parts of the world showed remarkable gains, the numbers sent to the United Kingdom and British India being especially noteworthy. Canada, British South Africa, Cuba, New Zealand, Brazil, Sweden and the Dutch East Indies ranked next in the order named.

These sales have not only benefited American industry, but the widespread use of these cars will also facilitate the development of further trade in American automobiles, accessories and parts.

The number of passenger automobiles exported from the United States by countries of destination are shown below for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914, for calendar year 1919, and for the first ten months of the calendar year 1920. Passenger automobiles were first shown separately in the trade returns for the fiscal year 1913, when 24,293 were exported. For previous years the totals for passenger and commercial automobiles combined were even less:

BEATING THE DUTCH

American motor cars which sell in the United States for $5,000 bring $7,000 in Holland. The freight cost is only $200. Duty is low. There is, of course, a low value on Dutch exchange, but when the import duty of only 5 percent is taken into account it can be seen that the merchants who deal in American cars in Holland are profiteers in the highest sense of the word.

Fiat Trucks Pathfinders For Sahara Desert Run

Nowhere in the world can greater transportation difficulties be encountered than in the Sahara desert, and so great are the obstacles encountered that it is generally supposed this region is practically inaccessible to all wheeled vehicles. Some time ago the French Government decided to open an experimental aerial line of nearly two thousand miles in length from Algiers to Tamanrasset, right across the Sahara desert, and the problem had to be faced of establishing petrol and supply depots along this route for the use of the planes. In reality this initial trip by car was the most important as well as the most difficult portion of the undertaking, for while the planes were capable of flying this distance, it would have been folly to have sent them away without preliminary organization along the line of flight.

A convoy of 13 Fiat 1½ ton lorries was selected to make the journey into the desert, taking with them, among other supplies, one thousand gallons of petrol and three wireless telegraph receiving stations. The vehicles were of well-known normal type used very extensively by the Allied Armies during the war, with open bodies and demountable tops, the only change of importance being the fitting of dual pneumatic tyres on the front, duplicating those on the rear wheels. This change was made in order to overcome the tendency of the lorries to bog in the sand, and to give better suspension over the rocky portions of the route.

The start was made from the suburbs of Algiers, and the first stop of importance was made at Ougargla, 530 miles away. It was at this point that the last vestiges of civilization were left behind and true desert conditions were encountered. At the best the road was only a camel track, but frequently this disappeared entirely and the first motor caravan to successfully invade the Sahara had to travel over trackless sand alternating with rocky surfaces most destructive of tyres and mechanism.

The outward journey of 1,864 miles was accomplished without any mechanical incident. Tamanrasset being reached one month after starting out, and after establishing stations at Inefel, In-Salah and Hoggar. The return journey was made under similar conditions, but naturally with a reduced load. Before the Fiat undertook this trip, several unsuccessful attempts had been made with lorries of other makes, and it was because of these failures that considerable scepticism prevailed in official circles regarding the ability of any vehicles to accomplish a journey of this length and difficulty.

Not only did the entire convoy of 33 Fiat return to the starting point, but on coming back they picked up eleven lorries of other makes, which had been abandoned in the desert during previous attempts and towed them into Algiers. The performance, while being to the credit of the vehicles undertaking it, shows the important role which motor lorries must play in opening up aerial routes across trackless country.

Germans Plan Steel-Surfaced Motor Course

Because the management of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway company would not permit German cars to be entered in the last race, and at the time intimated that they would not be received until they are accepted in other lines of sport, seems to have spurred the Germans to build their own race course and play by themselves in their own back yard.

Whether German motor car builders will attempt to enter cars in the coming 500 mile international sweepstakes race for a purse of $50,000 cash on May 30 over the bricks of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway is not known.

The Germans are contemplating a five mile steel surfaced course near Hanover. This will be an innovation in speedways if the plan is carried out, for there never has been a track surfaced with steel. Most specially constructed speedways are wood.

Small Motor In Speed Test Points Way To The Future

That small motor will be the real automobile motor of the future is clearly indicated by the results of the Thanksgiving day race on the Beverly Hills speedway at Los Angeles.

Driving a car powered by a motor with only 183 cubic inches of piston displacement, practically identical in size with the Hupmobile motor, Searies pounded around the Beverly bowl at a rate of 103.2 miles an hour for 200 laps—250 miles. The significance of this figure is that it represents exactly the same speed attained by Jimmy Murphy in the opening race on the new Los Angeles course, but with a car with almost twice as much piston displacement area.

From the standpoint of the automobile engineers and designers whose business it is to profit by the experiences of the racers with various kinds of cars and motors, this accomplishment is the outstanding feature of the whole racing season. It means that in the brief space of six months—for the 183-inch car made their debut on May 31 at Indianapolis—the smaller motors have been perfected to the point where they can equal records that were declared to be truly wonderful even for the bigger cars no later than this spring.

The Construction Of Goodyear Cord Tires

They are built up of thousands of tightly-twisted, strong long-fibered cords, put in the tire structure without interweave.

Each cord and each layer is insulated and upholstered with a springy cushion of pure rubber—free to exercise, flex and recover independently of the rest, without contact and without friction.

More material is used in these big oversize tires, more cost is inevitable—but the result is worth it.

They are so strong that they are ably defended against stone-bruise, blowouts and punctures; so flexible and so enduring that under the road grind they seldom falter.

They are so simply and expertly made that in case of accident they can be permanently repaired.

Goodyear Cord Tires will last longer, carry you faster, deliver more mileage from every gallon of gasoline, give you more satisfaction and fully redeem your investment.

They are made in the Straight-Side type only.

YOU CAN'T KILL U. S. BUSINESS, SAYS ERSKINE

Optimism Is Given By Studebaker Head

INDUSTRY IS RECOVERING

Those In Automobile Line
Have Confidence In Future
Of Production

BY A. R. ERSKINE
President Studebaker Corporation
American business has been under a major operation, but is now off the operating table and back in the convalescent ward. In the language of the street, it was "some operation," and in the language of the doctors, the operation was pronounced "a success," even though the patient lived. With curtailment of credit, enforced liquidation, falling prices and suspended demand, it was indeed a sick patient for six months, but you cannot kill American business, which is big enough to change economic conditions when backed with the natural resources of this marvelously endowed country.

With our great crops, unlimited mineral resources, big merchant marine, and 100,000,000 intelligent, ingenious people, America can and should be prosperous in spite of world conditions. Everybody was plunging and reckless the year and a half following the end of the war, and we were due for a tumble, but now that we have had it, business can settle down and prosper on the lower and healthier level of values that have been established by liquidation. Enforced liquidation and speculation have, in many cases, driven prices below values and costs of production. When such extremes are reached, prices rebound and confidence slowly returns.

What we need is a stabilization of prices at valuation levels, especially for farm products, which already are below cost of production, and a return of confidence which will bring buyers back into the market. Speaking generally, prices of raw materials are liquidated to a valuation basis, but retail prices for some goods are yet too high. This latter situation will undoubtedly be cleared up before the winter is over, and with the return of spring and sunshine people will have more "pep" and enthusiasm.

Our feeling of blues is to a large degree psychological. American business cannot be kept down, and will rebound to big volume with surprising recovery. The idea of from two to five years of continued depression besetting this country is dangerous to foster, repugnant and impossible, because American industry and the spirit of American business will not permit it. The gigantic industries of America, marvelous in their ingenuity, ability and extent, are the workshops of the world, supplying not only our domestic requirements of practically all manufactured goods, but those of the world at large to a degree and extent which no other industrial nation ever before achieved, or can achieve against our competition, because of our vastly greater size.

This statement of fact is not made boastfully or in derogation of the industries of other nations, but simply to refute skeptical statements of extended depression. True, the derangement in foreign exchanges, with the depreciation of foreign currencies, is an obstacle to American exports that hampers their fullest development, but a tremendous export trade will be done in spite of this situation. I am therefore confident of the future prosperity of American business and, consequently, of the American people.

Speaking broadly, the automobile business will recover as quickly as any and remain, as heretofore, a conspicuous figure in American industry. Anybody who thinks the automobile business has been undermined is badly mistaken. It is the third largest of our industries, and will grow instead of lessen in importance. The strong companies of the industry, with adequate plants and capital and good products, will grow and increase their business.

Coyote Chasing Favorite Outdoor Sport In North

Coyote chasing is rapidly becoming a favorite outdoor sport with a number of automobile owners in the northwest country. Several letters, telling of the chase and subsequent extinction of the prairie wolf, have been received here by the Dodge Brothers dealers here and one recently received gives further indication of the growing popularity of this unique diversion.

While touring in a car with his brother and sister-in-law eighteen miles east of his home, E. A. Grant of Barons, Alta, jumped a prairie wolf, which was the beginning of a five-mile chase that ended in the death of the animal.

Grant's letter reads, in part: "My brother said to me, 'Why don't you catch him?' "I replied, 'All right, we'll give him a little work out.' "We turned the car after Mr. Wolf and for the first two miles everything went beautifully with him—except that his tongue was hanging out and he seemed a trifle warm. "The next three miles I ran over him four times. The last time fixed him. All he needed was a knock on the head which my brother gave him with the engine crank."

It is significant that this car, which was driven five miles cross country, cutting, turning and twisting after a fleeing coyote, had been driven 13,000 miles without a single replacement or repair.

STEERING GEAR INSPECTION

If there is one inspection that the motor truck operator should insist on having made more than another it is that with relations to the steering gear. The steering apparatus should be gone over every single day. The entire system should be tested, and any slack that has developed should be carefully taken up.

APPEARANCE RENOVATED

One of the things necessary to keep up the appearance of the motor car is a constant touching up of such parts as lamps, windshield, frame, etc., where black enamel is used. Scratches and slight chipping off of the enamel on these is bound to come and is very unsightly. Enamel paints may now be secured that do their work with one application with a brush and with no rubbing.

Trade-In Value Must Be High, Says Ned Jordan

Price Of Car, Plus Cost Of Upkeep, And Depreciation Is New Formula

BY EDWARD S. JORDAN

(President Jordan Motor Car Co.)
Survival in the motor industry depends upon the ability of the manufacturer and the dealer to so successfully serve the owner as to attain a high secondhand value for his car.

Those manufacturers who can sell their cars in sufficient quantities, back up their owners with the type of service required and put into the car that which makes it a good investment—these are the ones who will survive by maintaining a high used value on the owner's car.

Motorists long experienced in the purchase of cars gradually have come to appreciate that the first price on a car is only part of the purchase price. Every one knows that, sooner or later, time comes when a new car will be desirable and the old car must be traded in or sold. When this time comes the actual price of the car is revealed.

The formula for future buying will be the price of the car, plus the cost of upkeep, plus the depreciation when the time comes to sell.

Those manufacturers who realize this are unanimous in their endeavor to build behind their cars the highest possible resale value.

In the last few months a remarkable condition has developed in the automobile industry. Many have cried "Wolf" and have been loud in their claims that the industry has at last reached the saturation point.

Yet 2,000,000 car owners continue to drive their cars. Nine million automobiles are wearing out. No one has bought a horse. No one has entertained for a minute replacing his car with any other means of transportation. Yet those with stunted vision cry that the motor industry has reached the end of its rope.

Last September, when Ford saw fit to cut the price of his car, buying suddenly ceased. The need and desire for transportation by motor car, however, did not stop. Every one immediately felt that further reduction on all cars was imminent. The history of buying repeated itself.

Today the motor industry faces a future as bright and as big as ever seen in the past. A new appreciation of motor car value has developed. The old idea that purchase price was the last price passed out with 1920.

Never again will the public buy motor cars with the same attitude of mind that they buy shoes, clothing and food. Hereafter buying will be done toward the day when the car will be traded in again against a new car.

The Raleigh Cycle

The evolution of the everyday bicycle, is an interesting one. When one considers the degree of perfection to which the modern bicycle has been brought, it is hard to realize that its presence covers no more than thirty odd years; its immediate forbear, the high bicycle, dates back but another twenty years.

This would bring us to the days of the Michaux "bone-shaker," whose first ancestor, the "hobby horse" has as its cousin the present day scooter, so popular with the kiddies. From the "bone-shaker" undoubtedly emanated the modern bicycle, among which are to be found such masterpieces as the machines manufactured and sold this world over by The Raleigh Cycle Co. of Nottingham, England.

The popularity of these machines is evident by the fact that the catalogue is printed in four languages. Glancing over the prices quoted, one cannot help realizing that with a fair exchange rate, a handsome, neat and serviceable bicycle can be procured at an exceptionally reasonable cost. The Raleigh Co. are to be complimented on the excellence and popularity of their product.

RUN SENSATION TO MEMBERS OF AUTO INDUSTRY

20 Hours, 16 Minutes Record
Achieved By Enclosed Car
On 751-Mile Journey

BUCKS SNOW AND RAIN Claude McGee And Roy Skinner Are Drivers Responsible For Buick Triumph

The amazing record of 20 hours 16 minutes made by a new 1921 Buick coupe in covering the 751 miles from San Francisco to Portland has furnished motorists of the Pacific Coast one of the big sensations of a year. Those who have toured the route with the last few months particularly appreciate the achievement for the road difficulties are sufficient to test a car to the extreme.

The car still bearing its coming of mud and evidences of the trip through which it was placed in the Buick exhibit of the Howard Automobile Company at the Portland show and it was one of the foremost attractions. Afternoon and night the crowds were jammed about the car, eager to hear the story of the wild drive made by Claude McGee and Roy E. Skinner, who fought snow, mud and ice without rest for 20 hours and 16 minutes.

THIRTY-NINE MINUTES LOST

An analysis of the time, as checked by the Western Union, under the direction of James G. Deatur of San Francisco, shows that the elapsed time from Sausalito to the Howard Automobile Company's salesrooms at Twelfth and Alder streets in Portland was 24 hours and 37 minutes. The 39 additional minutes were consumed in crossing the bay from the Ferry building to Sausalito and waiting at the end of the long line of automobiles to "disembark."

The record-breaking coupe was checked out at 4:22 p.m. from the Ferry building by Leon J. Pinkson, automobile editor of The Chronicle; Frank S. Herman, automobile editor of the Call, and George S. Daniels, automobile editor of the Bulletin. Checkers, with Western Union timers, were waiting the Buick in Portland, and watches were snapped the moment the wheels stopped rolling.

A quick computation of the elapsed time showed that the schedule of the Southern Pacific's fastest train, the Shasta Limited, had been beaten by 44 minutes, despite the condition of the unpaved portion of the roads.

The latest record set by the Buick cuts more than ten hours off of the mark made in 1914 when McGee, driving a Buick touring car, covered the distance in 39 hours 25 minutes. Making the new mark even the more amazing is the fact that it was made with an enclosed car, the first time that such a daring run ever has been attempted with this type of car.

But Buick speed, power and stamina seem to be built into every enclosed car as well as the open models, for this record-breaking coupe was taken out of the regular stock of the Howard Automobile Company in San Francisco and sent on its difficult trip with no other preparations than a thorough oiling and the installation of two additional spotlights to assist McGee and Skinner in driving on the slippery roads through the night. When the car arrived in Portland it had a perfect mechanical score, not a moment's trouble, having developed.

EXTREME TEST SHOWN

Some idea of the extreme test to which the car was put was found in the telegram of McGee to Charles S. Howard.

"We believe our Buick coupe was the only car up Smith's hill, north of Grant's pass, under own power, in the last thirty days. Oregon Highway Commission has to men and team stationed there to help machines over." McGee's telegram said. "The other places where we found very bad road conditions were in the vicinity of Dunsmuir and Galle in California."

The coupe covered 394 miles the first night. Red Bluff, at the end of the 200 miles of paving on the California portion of the trip, was left at 11:50, or just six hours and 59 minutes after pulling away from the Sausalito ferry. McGee and Skinner were very cautious when traveling the highway where there were other machines and slow speed was the order through all of the towns and where cars might be met abruptly on narrow, winding mountain roads.

CONSISTENCY OF BUICK

The consistency of the Buick was shown in the next stretch over the rolling hills to Redding. From Redding, where the coupe entered the Sacramento river canyon, the drivers found the roads steeper and sharper on the turns, but Dunsmuir, lying at the bottom of the canyon, was reached at 3:43 a.m., within two minutes of the schedule mapped out by McGee and Skinner before their start.

From Dunsmuir, the Buick began climbing over the west slope of Mt. Shasta. The night was bitter cold and the moisture at places had formed treacherous ice. Deep ruts and frozen mud were found near Weed and Sisson. Another trying place was encountered when the Buick detoured through Grenada. Nearing Yreka road conditions improved. Then followed twenty-six fast miles over the macadam to the Oregon line, and dawn found the Buick skimming the pavement of the Oregon State highway as it would through the Siskiyou. Grant's pass, 63 miles from the State line, was negotiated in nifty fashion and then came the deep going of Smith hill, with the Buick crew declining the kind proffers of aid from the team which has been hauling cars over the sticky grade now for 30 days. Only 23 miles of the 157 between Grant's pass and Eugene were paved, but the Buick plowed through without a stop, despite five detours around highway work.

Fifteen miles north of Eugene the West Side highway was taken to Albany, 33 miles, and then return to the Pacific highway carried the coupe to Salem, 25 miles, over good roads divided between pavement and macadam. Then came the final dash into Portland, 53 miles over pavement, with a new record to cheer the drivers, who were on the verge of exhaustion after their terrific grind.

"We chose the winter going and the Buick coupe to show what could be done," said McGee in Portland. "Enclosed cars usually are not used for record trips, especially over mountain ranges and through mud. But we knew that we could do with the coupe what could be done with any other Buick model, for they are alike in their ability to get there and stay together."

"Those who have made the trip often in former years are strong in their praise of the State Highway Commissions of California and Oregon for the magnificent highway systems they are building. What was once a terrible drive soon will be one of the most pleasant and scenic trips in the world when the unpaved stretches are linked up."

A Yank, A Jap And A Chinese; A Cop A Smash And—?

San Francisco, March 1.—"When Greek meets Greek, it comes the tug of war."

But when an American soldier in a Buick, meets three Japanese in a Ford, with a Chinese driving a vegetable wagon as the innocent cause of it all, and a Pacific cop yets in action.

STOP-LOOK-AND LISTEN

Attempting to dodge the Chinese when he turned suddenly to the left, the soldier collided with a Ford occupied by three Japanese, two of whom were bounced out of their seats in an unceremonious fashion. The motorcycle policeman who arrived to investigate the mix-up took his stand in the middle of the street at the intersection of Boretania and Victoria.

He gesticulated so vigorously in his quest for information that 50 or more automobile drivers thought he was instituting some new system of traffic regulation, so they checked their machine to find out what he meant he wanted them to do.

Boretania street was blocked for a block in both directions, while the cause of it all, the Chinese, rambled right along in his horse-drawn cart.

EASTERN TIRE MEN GETTING READY TO STAGE BIG DRIVE

Down With Square Curbs, And Like Slogans Will Be Adopted Here

In the Eastern U.S. tire men are getting ready to inaugurate a regular campaign which will have for its slogan, "Down with the square curbs" and "A square deal for three," according to word received here by the Central Garage Firestone tire distributors.

Whether the campaign will be launched in real earnest depends, it is said, on how municipal executives here dispose of a proposition to remodel downtown curbs in a manner that will not only result in the saving of an incalculable amount in tires, but will also contribute in a large measure towards cleaner streets.

Motorists do not have to be told how sharp curbs can ruin a tire, as most every one who drives a car has had experience along this line at some time or another. No matter how much care is exercised in drawing up to a curb a motorist will at times run too close.

What happens when a tire is scraped against the curb which would not occur if curbs were of concrete and curved instead of straight is that the comparatively thin layers of rubber applied to protect the fabric is rubbed off and when this wear occurs, the fabric being exposed to water, mud and oil, will give way more quickly.

In The MOTOR WORLD

Traffic policemen in Minneapolis have declared war on dirty motor car license tags. As fast as drivers with dirty tags are picked up they are escorted to a park where washbasins and scrub brushes are available. They are then told to get busy and clean up. If they obey orders, all well and good, but if they don't arrests are made.

In Nebraska there is a motor truck company operating between Council Bluffs and Omaha which might well be called the 12½ Stock Express. In ten months, 18,498 head of cattle, 158,019 hogs and 37,130 sheep were carried in trucks between the two cities. Better service was given than could be obtained from the railroads; the difference in cost was slight.

Having the "right-of-way" does not relieve a motorist from the responsibility of exercising vigilance while driving. He should remember that another motorist, coming down a side street, may have the same idea and that it will be too late to argue with him after the accident occurs. Cemeteries contain many graves where motorists with the "right-of-way" lie buried.

England now has a "poor man's" car. It costs $350, slightly less than the price of America's silver. The machine has ample room for two adults and can make 45 miles an hour. The design is original, the motor being directly over the rear wheels. Reports say the demand for the new car is greater than the supply.

You like to juggle with large figures so here's some more good ones. During 1919, the refinery production of gasoline and naphtha totaled 3,957,857,097 gallons. If all this were moved in standard tank cars of 8,000 gallons capacity, a train 3,500 miles would be formed. At an average price of 18 cents per gallon, this gas was worth $712,414,377.46.

In Japan there are two classes of chauffeurs—those who can back their automobiles and those who can't. The non-backers have first or "half" licenses while the driver who has learned to go backwards gets a "final" license and becomes a full-fledged No. 1 chauffeur. Those who hold these final licenses are envied by all other drivers who have not mastered the mystery of the reverse gear.

Now that women have gained the right to vote, the "Vote for Suffrage" banners which used to take a prominent part in parades, have been supplanted by "Vote for Good Roads." Women are proving to be the most enthusiastic advocates for highway improvements. As a result of their wholehearted support, good roads hand issue passed in several states this fall in spite of stiff opposition from the "unprogressive class."

Good roads, the rapid development of the automotive industry, and "She America First" brought 79,777 tourists to the Yellowstone National Park last summer. 20,000 more than ever visited the park before in one season. Altogether, 13,586 automobiles and motor-cycles entered the park, 3,000 more than in 1919.

Cajene Mori, son of the chief of the Yaqui Indians, age long enemy of the Mexican Government, is now studying advanced farming methods in the Louisiana State University. After completing a short course, Mori intends to buy a small fleet of tractors and take them back to Mexico for his people.

SERVICE COST IS LOW

The distributor in North Carolina got into touch with hundreds of Dord owners and interviewed them as to service costs. He found that the average is $4 a month, $10 a year, and the roads there are nothing to brag about.

GOATS' GOATS GOT BY WALTER EKLUND WITH DODGE AUTO

Sturdy Roadster Demonstrates
"Sure-Footedness" In Trip
Up Waimea Canyon

"Sure-footed as a goat" has long been a familiar simile. And another, newer truism is: To hunt goats effectively, go where the goats go.

And the Dodge does it! Walter Eklund, who represents the American-Hawaiian Motors Company on Hawaii, arrived in San Francisco with an interesting tale of the efficiency of the Dodge cars operating on the treacherous mountain roads of the Waimea canyon, Kauai.

On a recent goat-hunting expedition Eklund started out in his Dodge roadster, carrying four passengers, and another car carried four more of the party. After traveling about three or four miles up the canyon, the other car bolted out about five gallons of water, Eklund says, making it necessary for the Dodge to carry all eight people for seven miles over rough, steep roads. When the end of the journey was reached the Dodge had consumed just a quart of water and was not boiling, Eklund says.

That the Dodge performance in this case was not an unusual occurrence is evidenced by the fact that the Waimea stables uses Dodge exclusively in frequent trips conveying tourists up the canyon.

LUBRICATION HINT

Trouble is often experienced with over-lubrication of the front cylinder of the Ford car, the oil forcing its way past the piston rings and causing excessive carbon. This is caused by the connecting rod of the front cylinder dipping too deeply into the oil. A cure is suggested as follows: Level up the crankcase by raising and blocking up the front end of the motor. This is accomplished by placing a pad under the crankcase front frame bearing. If there is a decided pitch to the crankcase it may be necessary to use a clock that will require longer spring clips. The alignment of the motor will not be affected.

EASY TO SEE THEM ALL

Dependability Is The Real Standard Of Auto Value

Automobile Is Useful Only In The Degree That It Keeps Eternally At Its Business Of Running

BY E. H. COLLINS
(President and General Manager Cadillac Motor Car Company)

Ever since automobiles first became practical, there has been a constant search for a criterion of motor car value, a sound and clearly defined principle upon which to judge a motor car as an investment.

To this day, the question most frequently asked regarding automobiles is—"How can I tell a good automobile?"

The answers that have been given, and are still given are almost as numerous as the inquiries. Some say the gauge of an automobile's goodness or desirability is its appearance; others its economy; still others, its list of specifications; its special mechanical features, the quality of its materials, the accuracy of its workmanship, its engineering excellences, its speed, its hill-climbing ability, its responsiveness, its quietness, its flexibility, and so on.

No one will gainsay the importance of a single one of these elements, but the fact remains that they are simply elements, and the automobile chosen solely because it excels in one of these points, will surely fail to render the all-round satisfaction that a man has a right to expect from the car.

An automobile that has only its beautiful appearance to recommend it belongs in a show window to be admired. Its beauty will not carry its owner an inch of the way toward home if it is stalled at the bottom of a steep hill, or mired in the mud, or will not start.

And of what earthly use is the most remarkable economy of gasoline if the car will not perform the tasks its owner asks of it?

Again, the man who is constantly having trouble with his car and is often deprived of its use can derive very slight consolation from the thought that it is equipped with the cleverest and most ingenious mechanical devices.

Engineering excellences do not atone for riding discomforts and other drawbacks. Speed is not an unmixed blessing if it is only had at the cost of constant tinkering and nursing and coaxing. Ability to climb hills loses much of its zest if there is always a doubt whether the car will start when it is needed.

No one of these can possibly be the criterion which the public has been seeking. They are only a few causes that must be combined with many others to produce a sense of satisfaction. They are only a few elements that must be properly coordinated with many others to make up the one quality of an automobile that can unhesitatingly be named as the real criterion of value or desirability.

And that quality is dependability. It can be stated as a truism that an automobile is valuable only to the degree that it is dependable. In that respect a motor car is exactly like a servant or other employee. No amount of brilliance in a single phase of his work can ever make the undependable servant worth a fraction as much as the reliable, trustworthy, dependable one.

An automobile is dependable when its owner knows that he can rely upon it to do the same things in the same way, whenever and wherever he calls upon it to do them.

He knows it will start; he knows it will go no matter how swift the going; he knows it will respond with a rush when he presses down the accelerator.

If the journey be one of ten miles or ten hundred, he can count upon this same unchanging, uniform performance from the joyous start to the fresh, fine finish. Every mile of those ten, or ten hundred, or ten thousand, he is serenely sure of the same sense of ease and security. He drives his car into the garage at night, knowing it will meet him with the same splendid readiness in the morning.

AS REGULAR AS A TRAIN

One characteristic that charms the owner of a dependable automobile is the train-like regularity with which it can be depended upon to keep up with a pre-arranged schedule, on short or long distance tours.

Arrival at destination at a specified time is almost entirely and exclusively a matter of the speed at which the owner cares to drive.

It will reel off the miles with clocklike certainty, with the same never-varying, smooth steadiness, at any rate he chooses, from the lowest to the highest.

It will keep on doing this, not merely hour after hour, but day after day, and it need be, week after week.

It will do it without balking or flinching, arriving at its destination the same cool, quiet, unfustered and unfurried car as when it started.

Nothing can ever take the place of this quality of dependability as a test of an automobile's value.

And there is no better way of discovering which car possesses this quality to a marked degree than by watching and asking, to paraphrase the old Biblical injunction.

Observe the cars on the city streets and the country roads. Notice the car that is always running, and never pulled up at the curb or along the side of the road while its owner tinkers with its mechanism. Notice the car that starts promptly when the owner wants it to start, and stops just as surely when he wants it to stop. Go into the garages and repair shops and learn what car gives the least trouble to its owners.

Above all, inquire of your neighbors and friends regarding their cars, emphasizing always this quality of dependability.

Your search is sure to bring you to the automobile whose makers have insisted on dependability first, last and most of all; whose engineers have drafted dependability into the design, and whose craftsmen have incorporated dependability into every minute part of the chassis.

teeth, a condition which produces the changes in tractive effort.

TWO-SPEED DEVICES

The mechanical unit that we have just described is known as the sliding selective gearbox, and while it serves its purpose fairly well it uses a tremendous expenditure of effort to accomplish what is comparatively a small effect. We need a device which shall perform this service in a simpler and easier way, without the constant danger of breakage and injury that exists with the present type.

While the sliding selective gear set is the prominent type today, there are other forms in use. The next most important is the planetary gearbox, used in the Ford car, which, in point of mere numbers, makes the type important. The planetary gearbox consists of a group of spur gears, always in mesh with a central or master gear. This master gear is known as the sun gear and the spur gear as planetary gear, from a resemblance of the set to the operations of the solar system. In operation the gears are forced to revolve on each other, this action being induced by stopping the movement of the parts supporting the gears, which is accomplished by means of a sort of brake. When the gearbox is in high it revolves as a unit, giving a remarkably efficient action. One of the drawbacks to the planetary gearbox is the fact that it can only be constructed for two speeds, as the adding of other speeds adds so much complication that engineers are loath to employ the type. The Ford car, it is scarcely necessary to remind the reader, has but two forward speeds. Still when it is well constructed the planetary gearbox serves its end with a reasonable degree of efficiency.

In the truck field we find a third type of gearbox, known as the constant mesh type. This variety of transmission has not come into the passenger car field as yet and so is of no interest to us for the present consideration.

GOOD ROADS GET BIG BOOST FROM WOMEN'S VOTING

Biggest Single Stride Forward Since Invention Of Motor Vehicle, Say Experts

When women won the right to vote the good roads forces of the United States received "en bloc" its biggest army of supporters in history. Since equal suffrage has been in effect the better highways cause has been enriched by $356,000,000—this amount being voted for road improvement by the electors of eight states at the recent elections.

The travel and transport bureau of the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company believes that "votes for women" is the biggest single forward-stride for highway building since the advent of the motor vehicle. It points out that highway bond issues carried by large majorities in most of the states and that in the various state campaigns women took active and aggressive parts.

The issues carried were: Minnesota, $100,000,000; Missouri, $60,000,000; West Virginia, $50,000,000; Colorado, $5,000,000; Idaho, $2,000,000; Virginia, $50,000,000; New Jersey, $29,000,000, and Kansas, $60,000,000.

This sum—$356,000,000—added to the $650,487,000 already available in federal aid appropriations and state and county tax funds and bond issues, makes a grand total of $1,006,487,000 now available for good roads construction in the United States.

"Reports from various sections throughout the United States show that women voters in general lined up on the side of highway improvement," says the Goodrich Bureau. "For example, in St. Louis just before the close of the campaign to 'Lift Missouri Out of the Mud' the women of the city made a big final public demonstration in support of the bond issue."

"That women are real good roads enthusiasts is attested by the fact that they will not confine their activity to pre-campaign times. In Pennsylvania the state federation of women's clubs and other women's organizations, numbering thousands of the most influential and public-spirited women in the state, have organized to deal with highway commissioners of every county individually. Moreover they have pledged their support to good roads bond issues.

"It is entirely natural that women should be interested in good roads. Women are vitally interested in measures such as centralized rural schools, healthful motorized recreation in the open air, and transportation of food-stuffs to market, all of which are attainable only through adequate highway systems. Women may be counted on to heartily support any move where the welfare of their community, their state or their country is in the balance.

"The good roads forces of the United States have been swelling slowly, gradually and surely for the past 100 years. At first the advocates for better highways were few and far between and were considered by their fellow-men as fanatics and cranks. Since the advent of the automobile, good roads enthusiasts have multiplied more than during any other period in American history. Unquestionably the next most powerful step was when women were given the right to vote for good roads."

WHAT OF 1930?

"In 1914 there was one automobile for every 56 persons in the United States," says C. J. Nepler, general sales manager for the Oakland Motor Car Company. "In 1919 there was one car for every 14 persons. At this rate 1924 will produce a ratio of one car to every 3.5 persons. What of 1930?"

DON'T BLAME THE PLUG

What is the proper spark plug gap? "Approximately .025 of an inch," says the maker of AC spark plugs. "The well worn thin dime is still a good gauge. But make certain that all gaps are equal in your engine and don't always blame the gap. The insulator, if made of inferior, porous porcelain, may have absorbed oil and carbon until it is a conductor."

ON AVE. ED. VII

Remember, any fool can run a vehicle fast, and bear in mind that you have no schedule to make, especially when out on a pleasure ride. Use your common sense and you will not have a wrecked machine, crippled friends or family, and after the ride you will feel better, as your nerves will not be jarred by hairbreadth rubs with eternity.

BUY SERVICE TOO WHEN YOU BUY TYRES

Do not be content to buy just a tyre even though you think you are getting a "BARGAIN" buy service, too, and the longer mileage, the greater satisfaction, and the actually lower cost you will experience will show you real tyre performance and economy. We are ready to demonstrate this to you.

Every Pennsylvania Tyre we sell is backed not only by the Pennsylvania Rubber Company, but also by our own interested service which detects tyre injuries before they reduce tyre mileage.

GEAR IMPROVEMENT IS SLOW TO BEGIN ALTHOUGH NEEDED

The war has brought us a number of improvements in the mechanism of the car. That is to say, under the stern lash of military needs many weaknesses were discovered and remedies which, in the ordinary course of events, would have taken years to bring out. Not all these innovations have yet actually made their appearances, but the coming national shows will undoubtedly place most of them on public view.

Whatever else the war may bring us, it is devoutly to be hoped that some improvement in present types of transmissions or gearsets may result. Engineers are unanimously agreed that the gearset is far the most backward of all the mechanical units that go to make up the modern motor car chassis. And we may reasonably hope that some improvement in transmission design is imminent so that it will be of interest to examine the present types of this mechanical units in detail.

PURPOSE OF GEARS

The function of the transmission or gearset is to change the tractive effort at the rear wheels in proportion to the effort needed. By its means the rear wheels are permitted to run slowly while the engine is running fast, etc. In general, this control over the tractive effort is obtained by meshing gears of various sizes. In operation power is generated by the engine, passes back through the clutch, which delivers it to a shaft, which is part of the transmission unit. On this shaft are a certain number of gears which may be shifted into and out of engagement with other gears, mounted on another shaft known mechanically as a countershaft. These gears on the countershaft have varying numbers of
